No divorce

Princess, husband agree to separate

LONDON (AP) — After weeks of rumor and gossip, Princess Margaret and her photographer husband Antony Armstrong-Jones announced today they had agreed to separate and "live apart." They said they did not plan a divorce.

An official announcement confirmed what had been widely reported for weeks — that the 16-year marriage of Queen Elizabeth's younger sister was on the rocks after many ups and downs.

The breakup was the biggest upset in the British royal family since Margaret's uncle, King Edward VIII, renounced his throne 40 years ago to marry the divorced American commoner, Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson, now the Duchess of Windsor.

Margaret is 45 and Snowdon 46.

Today's announcement, issued from Margaret's Kensington Palace, gave no details of any settlement or say who would get custody of their two children, Viscount Linley, 14, and 11-year-old Lady Sarah Armstrong-Jones. Snowdon is in Australia attending an exhibit of his photographs.

Immediately after the statement was issued, a spokesman for Queen Elizabeth said: "The queen is naturally very sad at what has happened."

He added that "there has been no pressure from the queen on either Princess Margaret or Lord Snowdon to take any particular course."

Work for election of Ford

9 GOP governors urge Reagan to quit race

Nine of the nation's 13 Republican governors issued a statement today calling on former California Gov. Ronald Reagan to quit the presidential primary race and work for the election of President Ford.

The call was made in a statement released in Raleigh, N.C., by Gov. James E. Holshouser Jr., Ford's regional campaign coordinator.

Joining with Holshouser in making the request were Govs. Mills E. Godwin of Virginia, Arch A. Moore Jr. of West Virginia, Daniel J. Evans of Washington, Otis R. Bowen of Indiana, William G. Milliken of Michigan, Jay Hammond of Alaska, Robert Bennett of Kansas and Robert Ray of Iowa.

Not joining in the call were GOP Govs. Christopher S. Bond of Missouri, Meldrim Thomson Jr. of New Hampshire, James A. Rhodes of Ohio and James B. Edwards of South Carolina.

"We now call upon Ronald Reagan to withdraw from the presidential race and now with us and all Republicans work for the election of President Ford," the statement by the nine said.

There was no immediate comment from Reagan, who is campaigning in North Carolina. He and Ford are on the ballot for the state's primary next Tuesday.

Reagan has said, however, that he intends to remain in the race even if he loses in the North Carolina primary.

He says one of his main problems is fending off questions from those who want to know how long he expects to remain in the presidential race.

Inflation slowed to a crawl by large drop in grocery prices

Rises one-tenth of 1% for smallest monthly hike in last 4 years

WASHINGTON (AP) — A near-record drop in grocery prices held inflation to its smallest monthly increase in more than four years during February as consumer prices rose only one-tenth of a per cent, the government said today.

Falling prices for beef led the decline at grocery counters where prices tumbled 1.5 per cent, the biggest monthly drop in 24 years, the Labor Department said.

Gasoline prices also declined, but the department said the food was the big factor in the slowdown of prices last month.

February's increase in overall consumer prices compared with an increase of four-tenths of a per cent in January and was the smallest since September, 1971, when prices also rose one-tenth of a per cent. All figures are adjusted to account for seasonal influences.

Nonfood prices also continued to increase at a moderate rate last month, while the cost of services such as medical fees and auto insurance went up sharply but at a somewhat slower rate than in January.

The department said the consumer price index in February stood at 167.1 meaning that consumers had to pay $167.10 for goods and services that cost $100 in the 1967 base period. The index is not seasonally adjusted.

Despite the small February increase in prices, consumer prices still were 6.3 per cent higher than a year ago. However, that is the lowest 12-month increase since July 1973, when prices had risen 5.7 per cent.

Wholesale prices, which foreshadow trends at the retail level, have fallen at an adjusted annual rate of 3.8 per cent since November.

Government analysts attributed the sharp decline in beef prices — 5.9 per cent after seasonal adjustment — to an increase in cattle slaughters in January.

In addition, pork, poultry, fresh fruit and vegetables, and sugar prices continued to drop. Cereals and bakery products declined in February after rising the previous month, while dairy prices declined for the first time in nine months after seasonal adjustment.

Coffee prices were among the few food prices to increase last month. They are expected to continue rising sharply as a result of the damaging frost that all but wiped out the Brazilian coffee crop.

Prices of commodities other than foods increased three-tenths of a per cent in February, slightly more than January's two-tenths of a per cent rise, but still within the moderate level evident since last August, the government said.

Consumers paid less for both gasoline and motor oil, which declined 1.5 per cent and six-tenths of a per cent, respectively.

Prices for both used cars and new cars rose last month.

Hawaiian bets he can hack rugged Alaska

Has 48 days to walk 750 miles and win $6,000

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — A hearty Hawaiian who says outsiders can make it in rugged Alaska is walking 750 miles with a 78-pound pack, $100 and a promise not to hitchhike or cross-country ski to prove it.

He has 48 days to make it and collect $6,000.

It all began in a bar when Paul Roberts, 32, spoke up for the worth of non-Alaskans lured to the state for its magnificant scenery and promise of big dollars on the pipeline.

Three days after that, Thursday, Roberts was marching down one of the state's few highways to the tiny Yukon Territory community of Keno Hill — 750 miles away.

Eight Alaskans drinking with Roberts in a local bar put up a total of $6,000, which was flown to Keno Hill to await his arrival. He has 48 days to make the hike, $100 in his pocket and a promise not to hitchhike or cross-country ski.

Ontario man killed in L.V. auto crash

An Ontario man was killed late Thursday morning when his car went out of control near Brackett Field in La Verne and slammed into a tree.

The driver, Freddie Lee Nelson, 30, 1808 E. Fourth St., was pronounced dead on arrival at Pomona Valley Community Hospital. He had head and internal injuries.

Nelson's passenger, William O. Womble, 49, 1223 Cornelia Ave., Pomona, suffered only minor cuts and bruises and was released after treatment at the hospital.

La Verne police said Nelson was driving west on Puddingstone Drive west of Park Avenue when he lost control of his car just west of a construction zone. The vehicle left the road twice before finally hitting the tree. The auto, a 1974 model, was a total loss.

NEW LOOK IN EDUCATION

Franconia College President Ira Goldenberg does KP once a week

KP duties for college president

Administrator aims to provide 'alternative education'

FRANCONIA, N.H. (AP) — Every Monday morning, Franconia College President Ira Goldenberg dons an apron and bends over a steaming dish washer in the kitchen of the school's cafeteria.

Other administrators, faculty and students handle KP the rest of the week. They also order, prepare and serve the food.

The decision earlier this year by students and the faculty to kick out the professional caterers and take over in the kitchen is part of a larger reorganization underway at the small liberal arts college, housed in a sprawling old inn in the middle of New Hampshire's scenic White Mountains.

Students at the 13-year-old college also run the mailroom, help with janitorial and custodial work, recruit at high schools, develop grant proposals, work on the college accounts and teach classes.

Five administrators were laid off, including the dean and assistant dean of development, about half of the 28 fulltime faculty accepted salary cuts, the board of trustees launched a fund-raising drive and students agreed to involve themselves in running their college.

So far it has paid off in plans to cut student fees by 10 per cent next year — from $5,665 to $4,985 a year. But Goldenberg and others on the campus see far more important results and goals.

"I would have pushed for the reorganization even if we were $1 million in the black," says Goldenberg, a former assistant professor of psychology at Yale and Harvard who came to Franconia last fall. He says the aim is to involve students and faculty in running the college and providing a real "alternative education."

Franconia always has offered an alternative education — a claim criticized by some in the late 1960s as meaning student drug abuse and sexual freedom. It also meant no grades and wide flexibility in developing curriculum.

An alternative education is more than that, says Goldenberg.

Among other things, it involves a re-education of faculty, staff and students, especially about class roles, he says.

"We're all socialized. If I become an academic, thank God, I'm not a truck driver. Even if it's not said, there's a real class distinction between the professor and the truck driver and the professor and the student. That kind of thinking is hard to break."

Goldenberg, 39, says his idea of education includes a feeling of equal ownership and control by the whole college — and eventually the community outside the campus.

Former shipmate

Ford picks Gates as China ambassador

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford personally announced today he is appointing Thomas S. Gates, a World War II shipmate and onetime defense secretary, as the United States' chief envoy to China and nominating him for the rank of ambassador.

The appointment of Gates, who served as secretary of defense in the final months of the Dwight D. Eisenhower administration, to serve as head of the U.S. Liaison Office in Peking does not require Senate confirmation. However, the nomination for ambassadorial rank does.

The President, speaking to a group of reporters in the Oval Office, said the post is a very important one and that he regards relations with China as one of the most important relationships with any of the countries of the world.

Gates succeeds George Bush, now director of the Central Intelligence Agency, as head of the U.S. mission in Peking.

Ford said his choice of Gates, chairman of the executive committe of the Morgan Guaranty Trust Co. in New York since 1969, "reflects our conviction that this relationship is of vital importance."

The President said he and Gates served aboard the same ship in the Pacific in 1943 and have been friends since.

"I am greatly honored," Gates told the President. "...I look forward to the experience.

The banker said he would be back in Washington next week "to get some education" in the specifics of Sino-American relations and hoped to leave for Peking in another two or three weeks.

A native of Philadelphia, Gates will be 70 next month.

A partner in the Philadelphia firm of Drexel & Co. until 1953, he served in Washington during the Eisenhower administration as undersecretary of the Navy, then secretary and finally as deputy secretary of defense and secretary of defense in 1959 and 1960.

Gates became associated with the Morgan Guaranty Trust Co. in 1961 and was named board chairman and chief executive officer in 1965, prior to becoming chairman of the executive committee.

The U.S. liaison post came open when Ford shuffled top advisers last fall, withdrawing Bush, an old colleague in the House, to succeed William Colby as head of the CIA.

Bush had taken the liaison post over from the nation's first China liaison officer, David Bruce, a veteran diplomat who is now retired from the foreign service.

Lawyers draw 2 views of Patty: a liar... a desperate survivor

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Jurors in Patricia Hearst's trial enter deliberations with two conflicting portraits of the newspaper heiress — one by the prosecutor who insists she is a conniving liar, the other by the defender who argues she robbed a bank to save her life.

In final arguments Thursday, U.S. Atty. James L. Browning Jr. repeatedly urged the seven-woman, five-man jury to base their verdict on the evidence. Defense attorney F. Lee Bailey stopped just short of suggesting they ignore it and rely instead on her own testimony.

U.S. Dist. Judge Oliver J. Carter planned to issue final instructions and send the bank robbery case to the jury today. The trial is in its eighth week.

Browning, his voice occasionally rising in an impassioned two-hour address, implored the jury to watch again the film of Miss Hearst robbing the bank, read her underground writings, listen to her strident voice on taped messages and her profanity-laced jailhouse conversation with a friend.

Bailey, in a 45-minute oratory that barely mentioned the evidence, said the trial dealt with "dying or surviving. That is all that Patricia Campbell Hearst thought about."

Miss Hearst, 22, testified that she was a terrified hostage of her Symbionese Liberation Army kidnapers and participated in an April 15, 1974, bank robbery under fear of death. Bailey argued that a guilty verdict would encourage similar kidnapings in the future.

The government contended she was a willing convert to terrorism and Browning dismissed her defense as "too incredible to be believed."

He recited the major points in her defense, summed it up as if she were saying, "I didn't mean it," and then, leaning forward over a lectern, he said slowly and emphatically, "It's too big a pill to swallow, it just doesn't wash."

The tall, lanky prosecutor, glancing at a prepared text, made only one direct reference to Miss Hearst's Feb. 4, 1974, kidnaping at the hands of the SLA.

"I'm sorry that Patricia Hearst was kidnaped," he said."I'm sorry anyone was kidnaped ... but can you assume that she was a kidnap victim for the next 19 months?

"Don't be misled by the smokescreen the defense has raised," he urged the jury. "Judge this case on the merits. Judge this case on the evidence."

Bailey, discarding notes and a microphone, hammered away at the kidnaping and Miss Hearst's professed fear of the SLA as coloring all the evidence against her.

'Judge this case on the merits. Judge this case on the evidence...'

—Browning

'You have to resort to something besides evidence... It's riddled with doubt and always will be...'

—Bailey

'You have to resort to something besides the evidence in this case," he said. "It's riddled with doubt and always will be."

Bailey, peppering his speech with dramatic pauses and sometimes almost whispering, said there was no question that she robbed a bank.

"The question you are here to answer is why?" he told the jurors. "And would you have done the same thing to survive? Or was it her duty to die to avoid committing a felony."

Browning asked the jury "to reject the defendant's entire testimony as not credible."

He mentioned Miss Hearst's seven tapes sent from the underground, four of which contained angry, militant rhetoric spoken by her.

Browning also discussed other incriminating words and gestures and systemically attempted to discredit her defense for each. Miss Hearst said she made the tapes and manuscripts under duress, that she was brainwashed by fear and that her every action was based on a natural instinct to survive.

"She asks us to believe that she didn't mean what she said on the tapes," said Browning. "She didn't mean what she wrote in the documents. She didn't mean it when she gave this power salute, this clenched fist salute after her arrest.

"She didn't mean it when she told the San Mateo County deputy sheriff that she was an urban guerrilla, that that was her occupation. She says that statement was simply a sort of a shrug-of-the-shoulders type of thing."

Continuing his litany, Browning noted that Miss Hearst admitted spraying a Los Angeles store with gunfire to free two companions from certain arrest — "by the grace of God, nobody was killed." He recalled that the newspaper heiress said the shooting was "simply a reflex" drilled into her by her captors.

Winding up his argument, he stared directly at the jurors and said softly: "I ask whether you would accept this incredible story from anyone but Patricia Hearst, and if you wouldn't, don't accept it from her, either."

Bailey, in his final hour before the jury, said Miss Hearst's credibility was vital because she was the only one who really knows the full story of what happened to her.

"In many segments of this whole saga, you are either going to have to take what Patty Hearst said as the truth, or if you buy Mr. Browning's suggestion, you are going to have to disregard it — in which case you have no access to what happened because she is the only person surviving willing to talk about it."

She was abducted as a political prisoner, he said, and made an outlaw. She never surrendered, Bailey added, because the SLA warned her that she would either be killed or imprisoned for years if she did.

A verdict of guilty, he said, would prompt more terrorist kidnapings.

"The SLA predicted this trial," he said. "They also predicted your verdict and persuaded her that coming back woul get her 25 years. And if we can't break the chain at some point in their predictions, there are going to be other Patricia Hearsts. The blueprint is plain."

Speaking in measured tones and standing directly in front of the jury, Bailey delivered his last plea: "Simple application of the rules, I think, will yield one decent result and that is, there is not anything close to proof beyond a reasonable doubt that Patty Hearst wanted to be a bank robber.

"What you know, and you know in your hearts to be true, is beyond dispute," he added. "There was talk about her dying, and she wanted to survive. Thank God, so far she has."

Assembly OKs farm labor board funding

SACRAMENTO (AP) — California's nearly bankrupt farm labor board, condemned by growers as pro-Cesar Chavez, has survived in a crucial Assembly vote, but a bigger fight may lie ahead.

A $2.5-million appropriation for the Agricultural Labor Relations Board, the showcase achievement of Gov. Edmund Brown Jr., won passage Thursday on a 54-24 vote, winning the exact two-thirds majority it needed in the 80-member house.

The bill now goes to the state Senate, where growers' allies stopped an ALRB funding measure seven votes short of passage in January and have predicted they can block it again.

Growers claim the board has been biased in favor of Chavez' United Farm Workers, who have won a majority of the 400 secret-ballot farm labor elections conducted by the board before it suspended activity Feb. 6 for lack of funds.

The board needs the money because it spent its first year's budget of $1.3 million in less than five months.

The vote is expected to be a troublesome election-year issue for many Democrats in rural districts, where grower support can swing an election.

In an attempt to soften the impact, the bill was amended this week to set up a commission of five members of each house to recommend changes in the law by May 15.

One area of possible change is the access rule, which allows union organizers onto farms for three hours a day. The rule has been a focus of grower complaints.

One rural Democrat after another vowed to oppose Brown's entire state budget in June unless the commission's recommendations lead to rule changes by the ALRB.

ALRB foes dominated the lengthy debate, but Brown's backers prevailed in the final vote after defeating numerous amendments.

Assembly Speaker Leo McCarthy, D-San Francisco, who has been the target of pressure from both rural legislators and the UFW, said, "If we don't see those changes, this board is going to have a very short life."

Supervisors delay plan for reform

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Voters here apparently have lost their chance to decide on June 8 whether to restructure county government.

The county Board of Supervisors decided Thursday to give the controversial proposals more study, leaving open the possibility the matters will be on the Nov. 2 general election ballot.

Supervisor Kenneth Hahn made the motion to delay the proposals, aimed at separating powers in county government, until at least July. At that point, supervisors said, the plans would be studied "paragraph by paragraph."

Under consideration are two proposals stemming from a critical report by the Public Commission on County Government. One would create a county mayor and the other would expanded the Board of Supervisors from five members to nine.

GOP Senate race

Bell sharpens attack on frontrunner Finch

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Former Lt. Gov. Bob Finch says Congressman Alphonzo Bell is attacking him only because Bell is far behind in the race for the Republican nomination for the U.S. Senate.

Bell said Thursday that while Finch was serving in former President Richard Nixon's cabinet he was "an incompetent administrator . . . the worst HEW secretary in our history."

Bell also claimed Finch was removed as secretary of Health, Education and Welfare by Nixon because Finch's supervision of that office was "an absolute disaster for himself and for the administration he served."

Finch said it was not true that he was "removed" by Nixon. But beyond that, Finch said he was "not going to descend into a name-calling debate with Bell" on the other charges.

Finch said the charges by Bell are explained by "the fact that he is so far behind in the polls. I don't think I want to take this any further than that."

Finch topped a March 1 California Poll in the four-way GOP race with 37 per cent. Bell had 9 per cent, barely half his showing in an earlier poll.

Former San Francisco State President S.I. Hayakawa ran second in that poll. It was conducted before former Lt. Gov. John Harmer entered the race for the GOP nomination in the June 8 primary for the seat now held by Democrat John Tunney.

Bell's comments were the sharpest attack so far of what promises to be a bruising Republican primary. They were a sharp departure from Bell's earlier stance of concentrating his attacks on Tunney.

High schoolers to vie in math test at college

Twenty-four high schools from the Southland will participate in the 11th annual Pomona College Mathematics Contest Saturday in Millikan Auditorium on the campus.

The contest starts after an 8 a.m. registration.

Among the companies financing the contest is Pomona First Federal Savings and Loan Association.

Donald Bentley, professor of mathematics at Pomona College, is faculty adviser.

State health chief says

Methadone worse than heroin for addict

SACRAMENTO (AP) — State Health Director Jerome Lackner said Thursday he favors decriminalization of heroin — on a national basis.

He also said he believes it would be better for government clinics to give addicts heroin rather than methadone, because methadone may be more permanently addictive.

Lackner said such programs could only be done on a nationwide basis.

"If one state did it, we would attract all the junkies out of all the other states," he said.

But he said decriminalization on a national basis would take the profit out of dealing. He said present treatment programs do nothing to stop the creation of new addicts.

He said any heroin maintenance program should be linked to detoxification, and said that it's easier to get off heroin than methadone.

"We may be putting people on methadone for life," he said.

Lackner, who was farm labor leader Cesar Chavez' personal doctor, was named to head the health department last year by Gov. Edmund Brown Jr.

He said he did not know how Brown felt about his views on heroin.

"I think it's important for people to know where I stand," he said. "At the same time, I don't want to put my opinions on the governor's head or the legislature's head."

He said the governor is "extremely lenient" with his advisers.

"He hasn't got a claque of yes-men around him," he said.

Lackner made his views known in an appearance before a legislative subcommittee, in an informal talk to a group of about 100 demonstrators seeking more money for drug treatment programs, and in off-the-cuff interviews with newsmen in Capitol hallways.

He endorsed the subcommittee's restoration of $1.5 million to next year's state budget for drug treatment programs. He told reporters that Health and Welfare Agency Secretary Mario Obledo is also for it.

Lackner said he favors continuance of all drug treatment programs now in effect.

Valindan pleads guilty in rapes

A Valinda man accused of committing sex attacks on women in several valley communities has pleaded guilty to charges of rape, burglary, robbery, felonious assault and another sex offense.

The plea was made when Jerry Alonzo Romero, 25, appeared before Pomona Superior Court Judge Howard D. McClain for trail. McClain ordered Romero back April 21 for probation hearing and sentencing and he was ordered to remain in jail in lieu of $20,000 bail.

Romero was accused of being the man responsible for offenses committed since July in Walnut, San Dimas, Upland and West Covina. Whittier authorities have placed a "hold" on him for prosecution there, authorities said.

Industry Sheriff's Lt. Raymond Schartau said Romero selected homes for sale where housewives were alone. He gained entry by posing as a potential buyer or by breaking in later.

Romero came under investigation when a Valinda housewife reported him to sheriff's deputies. She became suspicious after he went to her home while it was for sale.

Bilingual group sets benefit fashion show

The Bilingual-Bicultural Parent Advisory Committee in the Pomona Unified School District will sponsor a benefit fashion show and dime-a-dip luncheon Saturday in the Garey High School cafeteria.

Community relations assistant Frances Marquez said the luncheon would be served from 11:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. and would feature a variety of foods mostly Mexican.

"You've Come a Long Way, Baby" is the theme of the fashion show which will be coordinated by Virginia Prado of Queen's Way. Seventeen mothers, teachers and children will model the fashions.

The fashion show is scheduled to begin at 1 p.m. Admission is free. Community support is invited.

Proceeds from the luncheon will go into a bilingual-bicultural scholarship fund the Parent Advisory Committee intends to award to two high school graduates this spring.

Elsie Rodriquez, a parent volunteer, will be the pianist for the show. Between fashions, three women will model Mexican dresses. They are Lydia Vasquez, multcultural education coordinator for the Emergency School Aid Act project, Mariana Ramos, an instructional aide at Garey, and Judy Torres of Pomona.

Police make chi(u)mps out of three gorillas

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "An officer is trapped by three gorillas," said the youthful voice on the police radio, but the 23 shotgun-toting officers who rushed to the Bel Air home burst out laughing.

City animal control officers were still searching Thursday for three chimpanzees — not gorillas — which mysteriously appeared and then vanished from the heavily wooded backyard of Debra Kessler.

"Last night we heard a tremendous commotion behind our tennis courts," Mrs. Kessler said Thursday. "You couldn't imagine what it sounded like."

Fearing burglars, Mrs. Kessler called police.

Sgt. Raymond Tetzlass and Mrs. Kessler's 17-year-old son, Matthew, combed the woods and found the chimps lurking in the trees.

The suspects were described as "Four to five feet tall, brown, furry and tall" by Mrs. Kessler.

"The officer told my son, 'Go out to my car and get my shotgun and radio for help,'" said the woman.

"The report the kid put out was that an officer was trapped by three gorillas," said Lt. Richard Pooler.

The 23 officers, all available patrol units in the West Los Angeles Division, responded quickly.

"The officers advanced on my tennis court and they all broke up laughing when they saw the animals," said Mrs. Kessler.

Bobbie Walker, a senior animal control officer, said one of his men saw the chimpanzees Wednesday night. Another officer searched the exclusive neighborhood Thursday but failed to find the creatures, he said.

"We're mystified where they could have come from," said Walker. But both he and Pooler speculated that the creatures may have escaped from a neighborhood home.

"Only one home in the area has a permit for wild animals, and that's (Playboy Magazine Publisher) Hugh Hefner," said Walker.

Walker said Hefner has a permit to keep two woolly monkeys and one squirrel monkey at his estate about four blocks from the Kessler home. All three of the publisher's animals are smaller than the creatures described at the Kessler residence. And Hefner's monkeys, unlike chimps, have tails.

As for Mrs. Kessler, she wants peace and quiet to returned to the neighborhood:

"I hope they don't come back tonight," she sighed.

Jobless losing hope

Ford people oppose Demo full work plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Top economic officials in the Ford adminitration today opposed proposals by congressional Democrats to enact so-called full employment legislation, saying such programs might hinder more than help the recovering economy.

Alan Greenspan, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, said the proposal would "create wholly new instabilities in our economy."

Federal Reserve Board Chairman Arthur Burns said government's main role is not one of providing jobs but of "releasing the energies of private enterprise so jobs can be created."

Government should provide jobs only after all else has failed, Burns said, adding that such jobs should be purposefully unattractive to encourage workers to seek employment elsewhere.

The two officials spoke at the concluding day of a conference on full employment sponsord by the House-Senate Joint Economic Committee.

A chief topic at the two-day session has been a bill recently introduced in both houses designed to reduce unemployment to 3 per cent within four years and provide the mechanism to guarantee work for every adult who seeks it.

House Speaker Carl Albert, a chief backer of the bill, told the conference that President Ford's economic proposal, which contemplates unemployment above 6 per cent into the 1980s, "is exorbitant."

"The Democratic leadership is committed to stopping this tragic waste of money and manpower," Albert declared.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gregory Roy, an unemployed Boston salesman, says he and many other jobless workers have little faith that the government or anyone else will come to their help.

"I've given up — completely," Roy told a joint congressional conference on unemployment in a graphic description of what it's like to be out of work for a year.

"I am one of the statistics," said Roy, 38. "The frustrations keep growing and growing. The bills have to be paid. It's the human factor we're talking about and the stigma of being unemployed."

The House-Senate Joint Economic Committee continues its hearings today with testimony from House Speaker Carl Albert on various legislative proposals designed to achieve full employment.

Roy told the committee Thursday he hasn't been able to find work in a year since he was laid off from a job in marketing and sales.

He said he belongs to a group of unemployed professionals in Boston which "openly solicits jobs from companies."

"They only want to hire people that already have jobs," Roy said. He said he had been to countless job interviews, only to be turned away with suspicion when he told the interviewer he was out of work.

Sen. Hubert Humphrey, D-Minn., chairman of the joint committee, said the two-day "full employment" conference was an effort to reassess the nation's fundamental economic policies.

Petitions filed in S.D. youth gang attacks

Juvenile Court petitions have been filed against four of seven La Verne youths arrested in connection with two youth gang attacks in San Dimas last weekend, sheriff's deputies said, while five adults remained in custody.

Similar petitions, charging assault with a deadly weapon, will be sought against the other three youth suspects, according to Los Angeles County sheriff's deputy Leroy Chastain

In addition to the seven juveniles arrested, deputies also seized five La Verne residents and booked them in connection with the incidents. They were:

Edward Cruz Beltran, 18, of 2802 First St.; Joseph Sandoval, 18, of 1489 Third St.; Timmy Gregory Cruz, 18, of 3424 Benton Ave.; Jose Castro Jr., 26, of 2103 B St., and Augustin Aguilera, 18, of 2045 11th St. All were booked on suspicion of assault with a deadly weapon.

All 12 suspects remained in custody — the juveniles in Juvenile Hall and the adults in the county jail.

The incidents of which the suspects are accused involved the gang beating of a youth Friday outside the Canyon Theater in San Dimas and an attack on a 42-year-old man Sunday in San Dimas. In each incident the victim required hospital treatment, Chastain said.

Two Claremont Colleges workers were booked in the West End Jail this morning in connection with the alleged March 4 rape of an UPLAND woman.

The two men, Abel Gomez, Jr., 37, of 27 S. Vista Place, Ontario, and Steven Michael Parsell, 31, of 7445 Klusman St., Cucamonga were arrested by Upland detectives at the police station Wednesday following interviews.

The two men are being held in connection with the alleged rape that occurred when the Upland woman stopped at a Pomona bar after work, took one drink and left to go home. The woman said she apparently passed out while driving home and woke up in her own bed hours later the victim of a rape. Police found the woman's car abandoned near the railroad tracks at Ninth Street and Central Avenue in Upland.

Spy linked to plot on Ford, Reagan

CHICAGO (AP) — A spy for the Cuban government allegedly was involved with a San Francisco Bay area terrorist group plotting assassination of President Ford and presidential challenger Ronald Reagan at the Republican National Convention at Kansas City in August, the Chicago Tribune said today.

In a story from San Francisco, the newspaper said federal agents have received information that the spy acted as an adviser for the terrorist group and allegedly took part in discussions centering on the plot.

It said Justice Department sources said that if the allegations are true — and they still have not been officially discounted — it is the first evidence that an agent for a foreign government has been directly involved with a domestic terrorist group on American soil.

Details of the Cuban involvement reportedly were supplied by Gregg Daniel Adornetto, 27, a terrorist-turned informer, who now is in protective custody, the Tribune said.

Plan to build nuclear power plant delayed

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Action on a proposal to build a nuclear power plant complex near the Colorado River has been delayed pending more detailed information on safety and the need for the plant.

The state Energy Commission said Thursday that the San Diego Gas & Electric Co. notice of intent lacked the information necessary for an adequate staff study and recommendation.

The utility wants to build two 950-megawatt thermal electricity generating plants at one of four proposed sites. It is the first request for a nuclear plant to come before the year-old commission.

UAW goal: less work, same pay

DETROIT (AP) — Reduced work schedules without pay cuts will be the United Auto Workers' principal demand when it negotiates new contracts this summer, union leaders say.

UAW President Leonard Woodcock said Thursday the strategy is designed to get the union's 60,000 laid-off members back to work.

"The central theme of 1976 bargaining has to be job security. This has to be achieved by reduced work time," said Woodcock at the opening session of a UAW collective bargaining convention.

About 2,800 delegates will be here through Saturday to approve general demands which will be presented to industry bargainers when formal talks with the auto makers begin in July. Contracts with Ford, General Motors and Chrysler — covering 850,000 auto and farm implement workers in the United States and Canada — expire in September.

Woodcock did not outline any specific plan for reducing work time. He said union negotiators need flexibility at the bargaining table "so as not to be locked into any one position."

But he did say, "We want to examine all possibilities ... reduction in the time worked each week, in the time worked each year, in total work life or any feasible combination which results in more jobs."

At a news conference after his speech, Woodcock would not rule out a drive for a 32-hour week at 40 hours' pay, a proposal sought by several UAW locals in the 1.4-million-member union. However, top union sources say that proposal is too costly for serious consideration.

VIOLENCE IN SOUTH AFRICA

South African police sergeant arrests demonstrator in Johannesburg Thursday after outbreak of violence during demonstration in support of seven blacks on trial on political charges. Police were pelted with sticks stones and bottles.

New home price drops

WASHINGTON (AP) — It's a buyer's market for house hunters. The Federal Home Loan Bank Board reported Thursday that the average price of new homes dropped $2,000 in February to $45,200.

The effective interest rates on new homes declined for the third straight month to 8.94 per cent from 8.99 per cent in January, the board said. The rate has not increased in four months.

Reaction by blacks feared

Black nationalist leader Joshua Nkomo said he would hold a news conference soon and Prime Minister Ian Smith said he may make a statement later in the day.

Police reinforcements were reported dispatched immediately to Salisbury's African townships as a precaution against possibly violent black reaction.

Rhodesia, dominated by the 274,000 white minority, broke away from Britain in 1965 to avoid granting majority rule to the 5.7 million blacks. It has been under increasing pressure from much of the world since.

In recent months, black guerrillas based in neighboring Mozambique have increased crossborder raids, and the government of Mozambique closed the 800-mile frontier March 3 and declared it considered itself in a state of war with Rhodesia.

The two negotiating teams met in the former governor's lodge for 10 minutes today and the Nkomo group left the building to confer among themselves.

They re-entered the building for a further half hour and when they emerged both sides said the talks were broken off.

"We have had lengthy discussions and a considerable amount of work has been done over a period of months," a joint statement said.

"We have now reached an impasse and are therefore breaking off the talks. This will provide an opportunity for consultation and consideration.

LIBERTY'S AUTOGRAPH

President's dog Liberty rings bell with fans who want paw-print autograph

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford's dog Liberty has apparently reached a canine star status approaching Lassie or Rin Tin Tin. Two-legged and four-legged fans are writing the White House in increasing numbers asking for paw-autographed pictures of Ford's Golden Retriever.

Public demand for these pictures by dog lovers has reached the point where the White House has had a special rubber stamp cut with the smeared imprint of the First Dog's paw.

It's usually accompanied by a letter from the President's 18-year-old daughter, Susan, telling the recipient the paw print is in fact stamped on because Liberty would have a sore foot if she had to autograph each request herself.

Liberty often gets letters written in the first person from other dogs telling the President's pooch how they think Ford is doing in office or how much they like the First Lady.

One letter addressed to Liberty Ford, care of the White House, said, "If you are ever traveling to Meridian, Miss., I would appreciate it if you would stop and we could pick a bone or drink some coffee together." It was signed, "Folly Till," with a dog's footprint.

Once, right after Liberty had her nine puppies last autumn, the photo requests were so numerous that Susan Ford was busy for two weeks trying to fill them, according to one White House staffer.

Now the White House is getting about 20 requests a week for photographs of President Ford and his dog with the dog's paw-tograph.

Several local humane societies have written in asking for these photographs with Liberty's paw print on them, and an aide to Mrs. Ford said the animal welfare groups have turned around and sold the photos for as much as $50 at fund-raising functions for animal shelters. The aide said these requests are gladly fulfilled because Susan Ford is very interested in animal welfare causes.

OIA noise level to be discussed

The level of noise emitting from Ontario International Airport will be discussed by officials of the California Department of Transportation at a public hearing next June.

Airport operators are seeking a variance from the state's noise law regarding the noise level the facility must reach by 1986.

Based on data from a monitoring system, officials said they can comply with state regulations with the exception of 27 homes west of the runway.

Under a state program, the airport must reduce its noise level to 75 decibels between 1976 and 1981, 70 decibels between 1981 and 1986 and to 65 decibels after 1986.

Officials said the 27 homes involved in the variance request are located between Mission and Holt boulevards and Grove and Campus avenues.

Basis for the variance is that the area is designated for industrial use and the airport has a noise abatement program, they added.

The program includes plans to build a replacement runway with the threshold shifted to the east so departing planes will be at a higher altitude when passing over residential areas and to work with the Federal Aviation Administration in having some departing planes flying over non-residential areas.

Date and location of the hearing has not been determined, said officials.

Appeals court to take up Judge Egly order in divorce

An appeals court hearing has been scheduled into the order issued recently by Pomona Superior Court Judge Paul Egly which barred Mrs. Judy Song and her husband, State Sen. Alfred H. Song, from making statements to newsmen about their pending divorce.

And in the meantime, Mrs. Song will be able to talk with anyone she wants pending the hearing April 15 on her appeal of the order.

The order, described as a gag by Mrs. Song's attorney, Edwin S. Saul of Los Angeles, was issued March 2 by Egly at the request of Song's attorney. Song, D-Monterey Park, claimed that his wife wanted to harass him by trying the case in the press. Song is chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee.

Egly, who issued the order, said it was not a gag, but was intended only to prevent either party from using the media "to annoy, molest or harass the other." The order prohibited the couple from making statements to reporters that "are unnecessary and not newsworthy and are done for the sole purpose of harassing the other party."

Saul appealed to the Second District Court of Appeal which stayed the order until it can review the action.

Packard sees Ford-Reagan ticket

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — President Ford's latest primary showing guarantees him the Republican nomination, says David Packard, wealthy GOP leader who was an undersecretary of defense in the Nixon administration.

The Palo Alto industrialist, honorary national finance chairman of Ford's election committee, told a news conference Wednesday that former California Gov. Ronald Reagan may be strengthening his position for a possible Ford-Reagan ticket.

"Governor Reagan may continue in the race because he has already established himself as a national leader of the Republican Party second only to President Ford," said Packard. By campaigning in several more primaries he will further strengthen his position as Mr. No. 2, said Packard.

A Ford-Reagan ticket is a "clear possibility," he said, adding: "Both men are close in their basic philosophy, that the cost of government should be cut down and that the nation should maintain a position of strength."

Bay P.D. drinking ban due

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Police business was rushing this week, one way or another.

Chief Charles Gain issued tough new rules Wednesday aimed at ferreting out policemen who drink on duty, and he vowed to use nonpolice undercover agents to see that the regulations are carried out.

The rules require that officers who drinks on duty face possible suspension for three months without pay on the first offense, and dismissal on the second.

Police union president Gerald Crowley immediately attacked the new rules as an example of Gain's "administration through fear," an opinion Gain scoffed at as "ridiculous."

Gain said existing rules against imbibing on duty have not been enforced. He added: "The fact that members continue to violate these rules indicates deficiencies in supervision and inadequate punishment necessary to create the proper detereent."

The no-drinking rules go into effect next Wednesday, said Gain. "Surveillance will be conducted by nonpolice personnel as necessary," he added," refusing to say where he would get the agents.

In another development, Gain told the Police Retirement Board it has been lax in allowing some police to work "light duty" when they should be retired.

"There are between 50 and 60 officers who are presently working with some sort of physical disability," Gain said, noting that regulations require that all officers be physically able to perform full duties.

Fire hits pool shed at condo

Swimming may be delayed at the Bradford Place condominium in La Verne while the fire-damaged pool storage shed is repaired.

A fire at 9:30 a.m. Wednesday caused $4,000 to the structure and $4,000 to the contents, according to La Verne Fire Department officials.

The building contained the pool heater, filtering and playground equipment. The condominium is at Foothill Boulevard and Bixby Street.

Cause of the fire is under investigation.

Francis Ching named to board

Ching is director of the Los Angeles County Arboretum in Arcadia. The others appointed to the Los Angeles Beautiful board are Lorraine Walsh of Palos Verdes and Mrs. Paul Saffo of Rolling Hills Estates.

Baton classes to be offered

The Walnut Valley Recreation Department will offer baton corps classes Mondays and Tuesdays for beginning and intermediate students in the near future.

The teacher will be Jayne Stern who has competed nationally.

The primary goal of the classes is to form a baton corps to represent Walnut in parade competitions.

Classes are now forming for basic tennis instruction with coach Bill Murray. They will be taught on the courts at Walnut High School for seven consecutive Saturdays beginning March 20.

Those interested in enrolling in either class may call 595-1261, Extension 241.

Cycle bumped, passenger hurt

A Pomona woman was injured Tuesday when a van struck a motorcycle and pushed it into a sedan near Chino.

Dorothy Tindall, 25, of 1876 Bonnie Brae St., was admitted to Chino General Hospital where her condition is termed as stable.

She was a passenger on a motorcycle driven by Kenneth Tindall, 24, of the same address. The cycle was stopped on Pipe Line Avenue north of Carbon Canyon Road near Chino waiting for a vehicle to make a left turn when struck from behind by the van driven by Arlene Turner of 15188 Ashwood Lane, Chino, said highway patrolmen.

The impact pushed the cycle into a car driven by Frances Mills of 2338 Notre Dame Ave., Pomona. Tindall was also taken to the Chino Hospital where he was treated and later released.

Foster parents to be honored

Foster parents of the valley will be honored by the county of Los Angeles at a reception March 22 at the First Presbyterian Church in Pomona.

The parents will see a video tape on "Adolescence" prepared by Ernest Smith, an authority on children's behavior, according to Philip Wright, regional deputy of the Pomona District, Bureau of Children's Services and Licensing Staff.

Miracle in post

Ray Miracle, former San Dimas city councilman, will continue to be that city's representative to the Pomona Valley Juvenile Diversion Project board.

The old council took its final action in reappointing Miracle to the project board. Miracle and Keith Brogan were defeated in the municipal election March 2 by Terry Dipple and Philip Wax.

Miracle has served on the juvenile diversion board for two years and is currently chairman of the group. Larry Rubin, executive director of the project, urged councilmen to allow Miracle to continue to serve and asked that the council "not change horses in the middle of the stream."

The council voted 5-0 for Miracle to continue in his present role and the new councilmen also were agreeable to this.

Youths to vie in skills

Six hundred students from Southland high schools and community colleges will participate in the annual skills olympics of the Vocational Industrial Clubs of America Saturday at Mt. San Antonio College.

The students will demonstrate their skills in dozens of events. They will compete in competency in aviation mechanics, auto mechanics, police and fire sciences, sheet metal work, welding, speech and other skills.

The coeducational program, sponsored by the California Bureau of Industrial Education, is designed to provide students with not only skills development but with leadership training to enhance their career potentials and intrapersonal relations.

The public may view the day-long activities free and join the students as they reconvene at 5 p.m. in the open forum for the selection of winners.

Members of the MSAC VICA club will be available all day to guide visitors to the skills events. VICA will also staff food booths during the day, to help raise scholarship funds for vocational and industrial students on campus.

Bond sale sought by LVC

La Verne College plans to sell "working capital bonds" to help the school over its current cash flow problems.

College officials hope to have the approval of the California corporations commissioner in time to begin selling the bonds by April 1.

The denomination and interest earned by the bonds will be determined by a trustee executive committee.

The first series of bonds will be offered to approximately 250 friends of the college.

Folk dance show slated

Instruction and demonstrations of folk dances from Europe, the Balkans and the Near East will be offered during a program March 27 at Washington Park in Pomona.

The 8 p.m. program will be sponsored by the Pomona Parks and Recreation Department free of cost.

Tuggers

Five farmers from Zorra, Ontario, the smallest of whom stood 6'1;' and weighed 188 pounds, on July 4, 1893 at the Chicago World's Fair, out-pulled teams from Britain, France, Belgium, Germany and the United States to become tug-of-war champions of the world.

Kristopher L. De Rize, 1-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd D. De Rize of 1019 Quiet Creek Lane, Diamond Bar, died Thursday afternoon unexpectedly in Pomona Valley Community Hospital.

Services will be held Sunday at 2 p.m. in Pilgrim Congregational Church, Pomona. The Rev. Donald B. Keepers of the church will officiate. Todd Memorial Chapel Pomona is in charge of arrangements.

Friends may make memorial contributions to the Pilgrim Congregational Church, 600 N. Garey Ave., Pomona 91767.

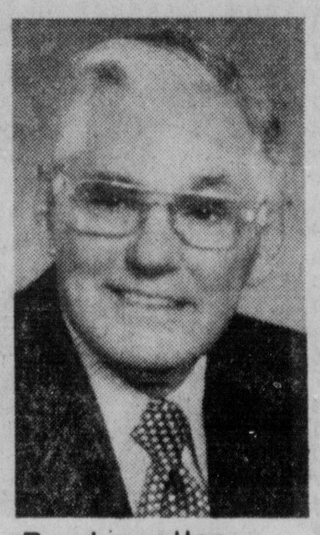

Lynn Golder

Lynn E. Golder of Grants Pass, Ore., a former resident of Pomona, died March 10 in Grants Pass after a lingering illness.

He was born June 18, 1898, in Rutland, Ill., and lived in Pomona for about 40 years before moving to Oregon 30 years ago. He was a veteran of World War I and a member of the Elks Lodge.

Survivors include the widow, Mildred, a sister, Mrs. Ruth MacMillan of Claremont; a brother, Paul of Cucamonga; two daughters, Mrs. Virginia Bowles of Orland and Mrs. Helen Mickey of Chico; six grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

Funeral services were held last Friday in Grants Pass.

Ray Lewallen

Ray E. Lewallen of 301 E. Foothill Blvd., Pomona, died Wednesday evening in Pomona Valley Community Hospital.

Mr. Lewallen was born April 12, 1909 in Perkins, Okla. He came to California in 1937 and had resided in Pomona and Montclair since 1941.

Mr. Lewallen worked for Home Oil and Tidewater Oil for 14½ years. He had also worked for Claremont Unified School District from August 1961 until his retirement in December 1974.

Mr. Lewallen served as a member of the Montclair Volunteer Fire Department. He was also a member of the First Church of God, Pomona.

Besides his widow, Ollie E., he is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Pat Cranford and Mrs. Velda Miller, both of Pomona; three brothers, Eual of Pomona, Floyd of Tulsa, Okla., and Walter of Wichita, Kan.; five sisters, Mrs. Lena Haun, Mrs. Martha Belveal and Mrs. Blanche Grather, all of Cushing, Okla., Mrs. Pearl Drake of Pomona and Mrs. Mary Blagg of Fresno; eight grandchildren, seven of Pomona and one serving in the U.S. Marine Corps in Hawaii; one great-grandson; and numerous nieces and nephews.

Services will be held Monday at 1:30 p.m. in Todd Memorial Chapel Pomona. The Rev. Herschell D. Rice, pastor of the First Church of God, Pomona, will officiate. Burial will be made in Pomona Cemetery.

Frances W. McDonald

Mrs. Frances W. McDonald, 443 Chester Place, Pomona, died Thursday at Pomona Convalescent Hospital after a short illness.

She was born Dec. 28, 1912, in Hurdsfield, N. D. She came to California in 1923 and to Pomona in 1943.

Mrs. McDonald was a member of St. Joseph Catholic Church, Pomona, and past president of the Young Ladies' Institute of the church.

Beginning in 1933, she was a concessionaire of Los Angeles County Fair for many years.

Surviving her are her husband, Robert J; five daughters, Mrs. Dyan Lancaster of Montclair, Mrs. Marlene De Gracie of Mesa, Ariz., Mrs. Stephanie Teufel of North Babylon, N. Y., Mrs. Tamara Lawler of Oxnard and Mrs. Monica Stottes of Diamond Bar; three sons, Laurence of La Verne and Tim and Dennis of Pomona; two sisters, Mrs. Rose Omohundro of Lomita and Mrs. Margaret McIntyre of Bismark, N. D., and two brothers, Raphael and Raymond Mulholland, both of Bellflower.

Visitation will be Saturday from 3 to 9 p.m. and Sunday from 1 to 6:30 p.m. at Blackman-Pollack Memorial Chapel.

The Rosary will be recited Sunday at 7:30 at St. Joseph's Catholic Church, Pomona. Mass of the Christian Burial will be celebrated Monday at 9 a.m. at St. Joseph Church.

Arnaud Etcheverria

Arnaud Etcheverria of Mira Loma died Wednesday at a Pomona convalescent hospital following a long illness.

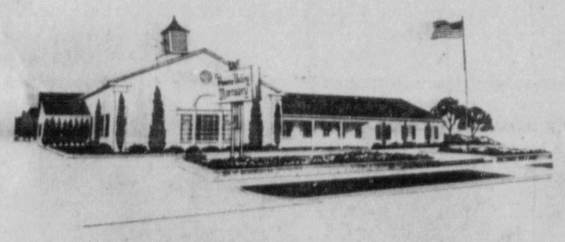

Mr. Etcheverria was born Oct. 15, 1937 in France. He had been a resident of California for the last 10 years. He was a truck driver.

He is survived by his widow Marianne; a daughter, Anna Marie, at home; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jean Etcheverria of Arneguy, France; two sisters, Mrs. Ferando Luro and Mrs. Jeannot Irey, and a brother, Jean Pierre, all of France.

Rosary will be recited tonight at 8 at the Stone Funeral Home in Upland. Mass will be celebrated Saturday at 9:30 a.m. at St. Margaret Mary Catholic Church in Chino. Entombment will be made at Bellevue Mausoleum in Ontario.

Price fixing bill unacceptable?

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some of the sting is gone from a bill to stiffen penalties for price-fixing, but House Republican Leader John Rhodes thinks the measure will still be unacceptable to President Ford.

The House approved the measure by voice vote Thursday after modifying its penalties and rejecting, 223 to 150, a bid to return it to the House Judiciary Committee. It goes now to the Senate.

Meanwhile, the Federal Trade Commission said it has reached tentative agreement with the nation's three largest auto rental companies, Hertz, Avis and National, on a complaint that they violated antitrust laws and conspired to monopolize car rentals at airports.

Details of the accord were not released.

Business interests have lobbied against the price-fixing bill, which would allow state attorneys general to sue in federal courts on behalf of state residents to recover treble damages for consumers bilked by companies that overcharged.

Thomas Kauper, chief of the Justice Department's antitrust division, testified for the bill last Sept. 25, but on Tuesday President Ford expressed "serious reservations" about it.

Single homes favored in historic zone

The Claremont Planning Commission by a 6-1 vote has sent on to the City Council a proposed ordinance intended to keep the one-family home as the predominant dwelling in a "Historical Claremont District."

The ordinance would replace a Historical Claremont Overlay District in effect since 1972, which featured multiple-family residential zoning throughout.

The district encompasses the area bounded on the north by property fronting on 12th Street, on the east by College Avenue, on the south by Harrison Avenue and on the west by Berkeley Avenue and Indian Hill Boulevard.

Planners propose preserving the single-family appearance within the area and prohibiting incompatible uses.

In the proposed ordinance, single-family and two-family dwellings are considered as a right, whereas multi-family uses are subject to a conditional use permit with more criteria for architectural review than before.

Boarding houses and rooming houses providing rooms for no more than three persons are also considered a right.

Both the Planning Commission and the Architectural Commission have more control over future developments.

A development may be turned down if the planners consider it inconsistent with the city's General Plan, or if the proposed density of use, extent of lot coverage, or even location of uses on the site are inconsistent with the new ordinance.

The Architectural Commission could consider such items as use of materials, colors, textures, and the relationship of the materials as being harmonious with the architectural character of the housing next to and facing the proposed development.

The commission also could, according to the proposed ordinance, modify or add requirements to conditional use permits.

The only dissenting vote was cast by commissioner Raymond Ball, who gave no reason why he doesn't like the new ordinance.

In other actions, the commission continued until April 6 the public hearing on a proposed condominium project north of Foothill Boulevard and west of Claremont Boulevard.

Developer P. E. Howard Construction is expected to come to the city with the project in three phases, with the northwesternmost portion being developed first as detached dwellings.

The planners expect the developer to agree not to work on the property fronting on Foothill Boulevard for at least a year so that the city can study it in relation to the general plan.

The planners have not reached a definite decision as to whether Blaisdell Drive should be extended eastward through the development or terminated in a cul-de-sac at its present location.

The commission has approved unanimously a tentative tract of 26 lots on 10 acres at the northwest corner of Base Line Road and Mills Avenue for Hughes Development Corp.

Police recount shootout day

Two Ontario police officers Thursday described their attempted rescue of a slain fellow officer under a hail of bullets Oct. 15.

The two officers and other policemen took the witness stand in the West Valley Superior Court murder trial of Steven Miller, describing their personal experiences as bullets whizzed over their heads for two hours after Officer Richard Hyche was felled by gunfire in the same area.

Miller, 23, of Ontario is accused of slaying Officer Hyche and of being responsible for the murder of Edwin Huntsman during an alleged attempted robbery at the Pepper Tree Motel on Oct. 14.

Police Officers Rusty Green and Pete Carillo took the stand on Wednesday and Thursday describing how they had arrived at an apartment complex in the 900 block of Deodar Street in Ontario about 12:15 p.m. Oct. 15.

Green and Carrillo, both dressed in civilian clothes, said they went to the area on a report of shots being fired at officers.

Green said he and Carrillo drove into the parking lot area of the apartment complex just behind a police unit driven by Officer Hyche. Green said as they exited the vehicle they saw Hyche lying on the asphalt about 75 feet in front of them in a pool of blood.

Green said he saw someone on his right near one of the apartments where the shots were coming from and fired one shot.

He said the man then ran around the apartment building and he yelled to Carrillo, "Let's get Hyche."

Green said he and Carrillo ran to Hyche and, while still hearing shots, managed to drag him back behind their car. Hyche at the time, according to testimony from a San Bernardino County pathologist probably was dead or very near death from three gunshot wounds, two in his head.

Carrillo said 10 or 20 seconds after he and Green arrived he saw a man with yellow hair crouched down in front of an apartment. He said he heard gunfire coming from the same direction and he also fired one shot in the man's direction.

Carrillo said he ran to assist Green in dragging Hyche back to the car.

Officer Paul Wagner said he ran to the apartment patio where he could see Apartment G where the gunman was supposedly hidden. Wagner said while on the patio he saw a man appear in the window and was fired upon several times. He said he saw stucco chips flying from the apartment wall behind him and heard bullets hitting a fence in front of him.

Wagner said he was fired on several times in the next hour.

Chino police officer Bob Caro testified that he took up a position on the Sixth Street bridge over the freeway looking down on the apartment and heard shots being fired from one of the apartment windows. He said he heard bullets whizzing over his head and felt a pain in his hand.

He said one of the bullets may have hit the bridge and sent cement and lead fragments flying. One of the fragments hit him in the hand.

Sgt. John Maddox described how he arrived in the area just before Hyche and saw a man carrying a box, suddenly drop it and produce a rifle. Maddox said the man fired a volley of shots in his direction. Maddox later said he looked at his police car and found 11 bullet holes in it.

The trial will continue Monday in the courtroom of Judge Richard Garner. Tape recordings made by the Ontario police of police dispatchers talking to Miller on the telephone during the incident, and a video-taped reenactment of the shooting of Huntsman at the Pepper Tree Motel in Ontario on Oct. 14 are expected to be played in the court.

The tapes and video tape were admitted into evidence over the objections of Miller's defense attorney Michael Welch.

BRADLEY SIMON

Librarian moving to N.M. post

Bradley Simon, Pomona city librarian for over four years, will leave the city post in May to become director of the Los Alamos County Library in New Mexico.

Simon submitted his letter of resignation to the city on Thursday.

"I've enjoyed working here in Pomona immensely. There have been so many rewarding relationships. I have mixed feelings about leaving," said Simon.

He said the position in New Mexico is "unique and challenging." Los Alamos, he said, has only about 16,000 residents, but one of the highest educational levels in the country. The Atomic Energy Laboratory is located there.

Simon became city librarian in Pomona in September 1971.

A graduate of Southern Connecticut State College, Simon received his master's degree from Florida State University and also did graduate work at the University of Miami and Arizona State University.

Last year Simon was honored by the Pomona Eagles Lodge with its "Home Town Builder" award which noted the library's many services, programs and special events.

MONNTAIN OR MOUNTAIN?

Officer Cliff Chandler of the California Highway Patrol checks sign on the San Bernardino Freeway in Ontario to determine if the street name had been changed. The sign marks the exit at Mountain Avenue. Highway officials believe vandals changed a "u" into an "n" in Mountain. Although some 45,000 motorists pass the sign daily, highway officials said they have received no phone calls regarding the sign alteration.

Senate blocks public vote on hills airport

Proposed legislation to permit Chino Hills residents to decide by ballots if they wanted a major airport in their neighborhood has been halted by the state Senate.

Assemblyman John Briggs, R-69th Dist., had proposed a measure to give this voting right to those who resided within a 7½-mile radius of the airport site. The state Assembly approved the bill last May.

But when presented to the Senate Thursday, only 13 members approved while 23 were opposed.

Supporters said voters should have a say on potential noise, pollution and congestion problems. Opponents, however, feared a precedent that could make it difficult to build any controversial project.

A major airport to cover 4,000 acres in San Bernardino and Orange counties has been proposed by the Chino Hills Airport Complex Inc., a nonprofit group.

Developers plan to build two 12,000-foot runways to handle 100,000 commercial operations and 20,000 commercial flights per year. The proposed site is four miles northeast of Yorba Linda and four miles southwest of Los Serranos.

Briggs, of Orange County, was successful in getting a similar measure approved by the state legislature in 1974, only to have it vetoed by then Gov. Ronald Reagan.

Frantic search fails to halt man's suicide

A 60-year-old Hacienda Heights man, despondent over trouble at work, eluded sheriff's deputies Thursday night and lay down before a train as he had threatened to do earlier, investigators said.

The victim, Michael Janies Susko, 2640 Doubletree Lane, was killed outright in the City of Industry by the train which severed his body in several places.

Deputies had been searching for Susko for more than an hour after he told officials as he left his place of employment that he was going out and lie down in front of a train. The threat came after a meeting with them had left him deeply depressed, investigators said.

Deputies used a helicopter in their search for Susko and had even stopped the train, an eastbound Union Pacific freight, while they looked for him. Finally, the train was allowed to proceed and as it was picking up speed, Susko ran from a clump of bushes and lay down across the tracks. The engineer could not stop in time and the victim was run over near Nogales Street and San Jose Avenue.

Neither the name of Susko's employer nor the nature of his problem was available from investigators this morning. His death was classified as a suicide.

Musical tryouts slated by VCT

The VCTeens, youth wing of Valley Community Theater, Pomona, will hold tryouts for the musical melodrama, "No, No a Million Times No!" at the theater, 132 E. Third St., from 2 to 5 p.m. Saturday.

The musical will be presented during the first week in May as a fundraiser for the youth organization.

Transit panel still steaming over possible county takeover

The West Valley Transit Service Authority board reiterated its opposition to state legislation creating county transit commissions Thursday, and sharply criticized the county Board of Supervisors' support of the measure.

Mayor Harold Hayes of Montclair, chairman of the WVTSA board, accused the county of taking an "end run" on the issue.

Councilwoman Eileen Carter of Chino said her City Council "regretted" the supervisors' action and would inform them of that disappointment. Councilman Hal Bailin questioned what gains the county would receive for such a stand.

In restating its official opposition, the authority adopted an alternate policy in case the bill passes. It was unanimously decided to request that the Omnigrans area of San Bernardino County be excluded, including the jurisdiction of the WVTSA.

This latter request would cross county lines deleting Pomona and Claremont in Los Angeles County because these two cities are members of WVTSA. It is also possible that this may be extended to La Verne and San Dimas in the future.

Mrs. Carter noted that "since disunity is the wedge for criticism, then we should echo the San Bernardino Transit Systems options."

The SBTS board has officially agreed to first, oppose the bill; secondly, if the legislature passes it, ask that San Bernardino County be excluded; and lastly, to negotiate that the provisions be optional and participation be decided by the local governments, not the state.

Assemblyman Walter Ingalls of Riverside drafted the bill last summer proposing to establish nine-man commissions for Los Angeles, Orange, Riverside and San Bernardino counties to govern all local transit planning decisions and local, state and Federal funding for public transit and highway and street projects.

The Senate Public Utilities, Transit and Energies Committee conducted a public hearing on the amended bill Tuesday. Wes McDaniel, executive director of the San Bernardino Associated Governments, reported that those testifying agreed that the state should take some active role in placing restrictions upon the commission. He noted, however, that the hearing was primarily a "political exchange on who gets the power."

The bill now goes to the Senate Finance Committee, the Senate floor and back to the Assembly for approval of the amended legislation.

Cities within the county have remained united in opposition to the bill. The county Board of Supervisors, which had originally stood with the cities, switched its position three weeks ago and this week gave final support of the measure.

Hayes said "the county took an end run on this issue. This is exactly the kind of thing that Ingalls and the legislature could use to leap on us and say this indicates need for this sort of thing."

Mrs. Carter reported that the Chino City Council is sending a letter to the supervisors "expressing regret that at a time when we should be expressing unity, the board is in discord with the cities."

Bailin, the new Upland representative to WVTSA, was first to question the status of Pomona and Claremont. He asked "Is there any provision to dovetail across country lines? Will they (Pomona and Claremont) be allowed to belong to both the Los Angeles County and San Bernardino County commissions?"

McDaniel replied that the Ingalls bill will have the tendency to freeze county lines. This immediately presents a problem within the valley cities who are cooperating in projects that theoretically erases the county line.

"I really can't understand why the county suddenly takes an aggressive position on this," said Bailin. "I thought it might be to get pass-through fund power from SCAG (Southern California Association of Governments), but it really doesn't do that."

Four arrested in poker bust

Four men were arrested on gambling charges early Thursday afternoon in a police investigation at 931 W. Second St., Pomona.

Police said they found the men playing poker for money at the single-story residence shortly after 1 o-clock. Those booked were Albino Gomez, 44, owner of the house; Javier Arroyo Dominguez, 25, 750 W. Belmont Ave., Ontario; Allen Gomez Gonzales, 55, 1570 N. Park Ave., Pomona; and Felipe Perez, 53, 940 W. Second St., Pomona.

Crash injures Montclair boy

A 15 -year-old boy was injured in Pomona Thursday night when the car he was driving hit a tree at Karesh Avenue and Edgehill Drive. James Micheal Sterling, 10366 Marion Ave., Montclair, was taken to Pomona Valley Community Hospital where he was released after treatment. Police said he missed a curve, left the road and hit the tree while driving his parents' car.

Exam is ordered for convicted Chino slayer

Valentin Villa, 21-year-old Chino man convicted of second-degree murder and attempted murder last February, has been committed for a 90-day period of diagnostic examination prior to being sentenced.

The order was made by Pomona Superior Court Judge Robert M. Takasugi when Villa appeared for sentencing Wednesday. The examination will be made at the California Institution for Men in Chino.

Takasugi scheduled Villa's next appearance June 17 and committed him to the custody of the Department of Corrections.

Villa was convicted in a non-jury trial of second-degree murder in the fatal shooting more than a year ago of Mrs. Barbara J. Rosas. He also was convicted of attempted murder in the wounding of her companion, Jesse M. Perez. The shootings occurred in Mrs. Rosas' apartment in Pomona.

At CIM, Villa will undergo a period of pyschological and physical examinations for study by Takasugi prior to his sentencing the young man.

MSAC will take to air

Mt. San Antonio College will sponsor a "Classroom in the Sky" program in May that will visit places of historical interest throughout the Eastern United States.

It will be the ninth straight year that the flying trip will be offered by the college. This year's theme is "Bicentennial America."

The flight will take place on the long Memorial Day weekend, starting Friday, May 28, and returning to Ontario International Airport the following Monday, May 31.

There is room for 178 student-passengers. The total cost of the flight, including food and lodgings, is $430. Deadline for payment is April 30.

Lenient courts mock the law

Life imitates art, they say, and that caper dubbed "The Sting" pulled off the other day by Washington D. C., police and FBI agents was, indeed, like something out of the movies.

During a five-month investigation, undercover agents posing as out-of-town syndicate members and operating out of an abandoned warehouse bought more than 3,500 pieces of stolen property from various denizens of the criminal world — the fruit of countless muggings, break-ins, hijackings and auto thefts.

The goods, estimated to be worth more than $2.4 million, included television sets, kitchen appliances, automobiles, credit cards, government checks and equipment and even an electrocardiagram machine stolen piece by piece from Prince George's County Hospital.

To celebrate the enterprise's success and to show their appreciation, the phony fences threw a party to which they invited all their friends. Then came "the sting" — the arrest of 108 persons and issuing of warrants for 75 more. It was the biggest such roundup in FBI and District of Columbia history.

Unfortunately, however, life has a way of stopping short of art. Or maybe it's the other way around. In movies or on television, the cracking of a case is usually the end of the story and the viewer is left with the satisfying knowledge that justice has triumphed and the evil-doers will receive their appropriate desserts at the hands of the courts.

Of the 108 arrested at the party, 70 had previously been arrested and charged with similar crimes — some of them repeatedly — and 21 were out on parole following convictions. One man had been arrested at least six times for burglary, forgery and other crimes, and in each instance had been released without bail.

In keeping with this sorry pattern, federal magistrates immediately released several of those seized in the haul on their own recognizance.

Claiming that 600 persons indicted on felony charges in Washington are now fugitives, assistant U.S. attorney Charles Roistacher complained bitterly that "most crimes are by people out on bail. The majority of those arrested (at the party) were hard-core criminals. People who commit crimes while out on parole or probation are making a mockery of the system. They are thumbing their noses at the courts."

But lest anyone think this a problem involving only your ordinary street mugger or burglar or thief, consider the case of the "great grain ripoff" which was coming to a conclusion in New Orleans about the same time as the Washington affair.

Charged on 36 counts of conspiring to steal some $1.7 million worth of grain over a four-year period, two large export companies — Garnac Grain, Inc., and Archer-Daniels-Midland Co. — pleaded "no contest" in U.S. District Court and were fined $10,000 each.

This was not even a slap on the wrist. It was more like a gently stroking with a feather. The costs of the two-year investigation no doubt were far more than the puny $20,000 in fines.

When a felon is sent back onto the street to resume plying his trade even before the arresting officer has completed his paperwork, or corporate criminals are given minuscule fines representing the merest fraction of the illegal profits, something is seriously wrong with our system of justice.

One of these days law enforcement officials, who work hard months or years on an investigation or who daily risk their lives to protect society, are going to stop and ask themselves: "Why bother?"

Undemocratic behavior

Dear Editor:

I am prompted to write about the Claremont movement to recall three members of the school board partly because of certain statements which have appeared in the Progress Bulletin. On Jan. 26 an advertisement warned Claremont Taxpayers that "you are about to have your pockets picked!", and continued by saying "A small minority of Claremonters, childishly unwilling to accept the majority vote of the Board of Education to eliminate the elementary program at Sycamore, wants to squander at least $20,000 of your money for a worthless recall election." On March 9 the letter from Roger G. Wells starts "Three of five elected Claremont School Board members have come under attack by a contentious cadre of organizers who demand their recall from office over the Board's decision to transfer the elementary school function from Sycamore School."

I should like to point out that the taxpayers who will vote for the recall are paying for the election as well as those who will vote against the recall. It is my understanding that the cost will be less than $15,000, which means that each registered voter will be paying about $1.00 each for his democratic privilege.

I object to the description of "a small minority . . . childishly unwilling . . . " because I firmly believe the vote tally will show this to be a majority of the voters and, furthermore, having worked some in the movement, I've seen no evidence of childishness on the part of the concerned parents, and others, working for recall. And I do not consider the election to be worthless; rather I think it is a sincere effort of concerned citizens to make democracy work.

As for the letter, the "attack by a contentious cadre . . . " is, to me, a phrase designed to arouse emotions, when objective decisions are called for. Nowhere in the recall literature or discussions have I found that the action being taken is simply because of the decision to close Sycamore School. Rather, it coincides with my reaction to the way the board acted at its Jan. 8 meeting.

At that meeting after the two minority board members had read prepared statements which favored not closing Sycamore, and after the superintendent likewise advised against it at this time, the other three took the action not only to close Sycamore as an elementary school, but also to move the continuation high school to this site. These three offered very little comment or justification for their actions, either before or after the vote.

To me, the action was so precipitate and unresponsive to the wishes of many parents of the district, clearly expressed over many months, and the board's vote, taken without open discussion, was so diametrically opposed to my concept of how an elected body should function (indicating to me the probability that the action had been decided prior to the public meeting) that I reacted to such behavior by subsequently joining the recall movement. And I'm not angry; just saddened by any such undemocratic behavior. — Dwight L. Ryerson, Claremont

The attempt to bribe IBM

WASHINGTON — The president of Nicaragua personally tried to squeeze a bribe from IBM in exchange for business favors in the Central American land.

The story was recounted by the late Arthur K. Watson, son of IBM's founder. Watson headed IBM World Trade Corporation at the time of the bribe demand.

Watson, later ambassador to Paris, was visiting the Nicaraguan capital of Managua on business. As he recalled it in talks with friends in Paris in 1973, he was invited in to speak with "Somoza, who was running the country."

The current president of Nicaragua is Anastaso Somoza. But one of those in whom Watson confided in 1973 said it was conceivable Watson meant Anastasio's brother, Luis, or, less likely, his father, Anastasio Sr., who was assassinated in 1956.

In any case, Watson said he was outraged when the Nicaraguan head of state put out his hand and "blatantly demanded a payoff" for allowing IBM, to expand its facilities in Managua.

Watson emphatically refused, saying his firm did not do business that way. A recent audit by IBM seems to bear out Watson. Except for some legal contributions to Canadian politicians, no payoffs were found.

In Washington, meanwhile, the Inter-American Development Bank (IDA) is considering a $24.4 million loan request from Nicaragua for the construction of a superhighway around Managua.

Such loans are supposed to benefit the poor, but this one would enrich President Anastasio Somoza by additional millions. For the "Managua Beltway," as it has been dubbed, would pass through acre after acre of property owned by Somoza, his family and his flunkies.

It would be 80 per cent financed with a long-term, low-interest loan from the IDA. This means the American taxpayer, in short, would be supplying the Nicaraguan government with about $16 million at two per cent interest, payable within 40 years. The "Managua Beltway," of course, would increase the value of Somoza's personal property by millions of dollars. It would be paved, furthermore, with concrete blocks manufactured by the National Cement Company, which Somoza also owns.

Indeed, the benefits that would redound to the dictator have so astounded IDA officials that the loan is being held up until Nicaragua enacts a tax law that would prevent "unjust enrichment" to anyone.

Footnote: Nicaraguan ambassador Guillermo Sevilla-Sacasa, acknowledged that the proposed road would pass through Somoza property but argued that it would cross land owned by other people as well. As to the IBM bribery demand, the ambassador said none of the Somozas would ever have "used such methods. I assure you it is a very honest family." Sevilla-Sacasa is the brother-in-law of President Anastasio Somoza.

SOLAR ECLIPSE: It's hard to ignore the sun, but the Energy Research and Development Agency (ERDA) has done it.

In preparing a "comprehensive national plan" for energy development, ERDA has ignored solar energy. This oversight, charges a confidential Senate memo, is "politically motivated."

Incredibly, ERDA's low opinion of solar energy is based on studies conducted by General Electric, Westinghouse and TRW which have a huge financial stake in developing nuclear energy.

The Senate memo, prepared for Sen. Thomas McIntyre, D-N.H. charges that ERDA has blind bias in favor of nuclear power. Its energy plan calls for the U.S. to increase consumption of nuclear power more than five times by 1985.

New tax giveaways

Despite years of fiery rhetoric, campaign promises and some small improvements recently adopted by Congress, the federal tax structure still leaves a lot to be desired. It continues to be filled with injustices.

A look at some recent government reports highlights this most dramatically:

— According to the Internal Revenue Service, 22 individuals reporting incomes in 1973 of $500,000 and over paid no federal income taxes whatsoever. Seven of these superwealthy Americans reported that their incomes that year exceeded $1 million.

— Eight large corporations with profits totalling $844 million paid no income taxes in 1974, according to a congressional study. The effective average corporate tax rate for 142 of the nation's largest companies was only 22.6 per cent, less than half the statutory 48 per cent rate.

— Data from the U.S. Treasury reveals that U.S.-based multinational corporations earned $53.6 billion abroad in 1974 and paid U.S. corporate taxes of $1.7 billion, an effective tax rate of only 3.2 per cent.

As a result of these and other injustices, working families pay much more than their share of the tax load.

But in 1971, those small steps were completely reversed under the Nixon Administration's tax giveaways to business.

Early last year, as part of the emergency tax cut to stimulate the economy, some additional steps toward tax justice were taken. The oil depletion allowance was substantially eliminated and limitations were put on some of the loopholes available to U.S.-based multinational corporations.

The emergency tax cut and its extension to mid-1976 prevented a further downward spiraling of the economy and made a modest contribution to tax justice. In light of continued high unemployment, especially in black areas of the country, and the need for consumer purchasing power, the tax cut cannot be allowed to lapse in June.

The Ford administration has now proposed an array of new tax giveaways designed to benefit corporations, banks and wealthy individuals. The administration forecasts a huge 32 per cent increase in corporate profits next year and admits its tax giveaways would save corporations $12.2 billion in taxes alone in 1977.

In the 1960's, corporations paid about one-third of the nation's income taxes. In recent years, the corporate share has slipped to about 25 per cent. By 1981, President Ford wants the corporate share of the nation's income tax load to be cut to less than 20 per cent.

Obviously, that would mean the workers' share of the tax burden would increase even more. The President's proposal of a so-called $28 billion income tax cut, linked to an equal slash in the budget, is pure politics. There would not be a $28 billion tax cut, in fact, and it is an excuse to dismantle vitally needed social programs.

Congress should reject this Presidential gimmick and vote to extend the present payroll tax withholding rate now scheduled to expire. The American people cannot tolerate an increase in taxes this summer.

Doc Peirsol

Just in jest

Folks who say newspapers never print anything but bad news just aren't reading their papers carefully enough. Otherwise they would have seen that little one paragraph item stating that in Minnesota the minimum age for legal drinking has been raised from 18 years of age to 19. —

And that wasn't all the good news printed that day. There was also a story telling how birdwatchers in the San Francisco Bay area had spotted an Olivaceous Flycatcher, a bird never seen in that area before. — But even more heart warming was the report that the Chief of Police of Los Angeles had personally phoned oilman Henry Salvatori to express concern over the recent break-in and burglary at the Salvatori home.

— However, that may not be quite the good news that it sounds. Hundreds of Los Angeles citizens are now wondering why they didn't get similar calls.

Mail voting may get trial

By EARL G. WATERS

A plan which could be the answer to the problems and criticisms of failures of citizens to get out and vote has been advanced by Senator Robert Presley. He proposes that precinct polling places be eliminated and ballots be mailed to registrants and returned by mail.

The idea would seem to have great merit for it leaves little excuse for citizens not to vote and has the prospect of great savings to the taxpayers through the savings which could be realized by no longer renting polling places and hiring an army of precinct election officials.

It is no great departure from that which exists now with the absentee ballots. The only difference being that few avail themselves of the mail privilege of that system and it requires a vote to request the mailing of his ballot.

And, Presley being a cautious man, is asking now for only a trial of the idea. His suggestion is that his home district of Riverside County be selected as a pilot to test the scheme. In support he has obtained a resolution from the Riverside Board of Supervisors endorsing the plan and urging that county be the guinea pig.

One would think that those who have been clamoring for a greater voter turnout would rush to embrace the Presley's bill, SB 1611. It might also be expected that it would receive support from local officials, citizens, and taxpayers, especially the conservatives, because of the possibilities of saving taxdollars.

Not so. To this point his bill has received only slight support and a great deal of opposition.

Oddly, much of the opposition has come from Republicans who see it as some kind of a Democratic plot, overlooking the fact that Republicans generally are favored by absentee voters and ignoring the chance to save taxdollars.

One of the most specious arguments in opposition is that, deprived of the privacy of the polling place, a dominant member of the family would compel his choice on the rest of the family.

Presley concedes that possibility but contends it would be a minimal effect on the whole process. Undoubtedly such persons already exercise that influence in the marking of sample ballots and absentee as well. But the contention that it would exist to a degree as to influence an election is about as valid as the old idea that votes could be influenced by the buying of a drink and therefore all saloons must be closed on election day.

There is perhaps some basis for fears that it would lead to voter fraud but the same possibility exists in connection with absentee ballots and seem to have been safeguarded against by various controls.

Presley argues that once a pilot run has been tested voting by mail will be as readily accepted as banking by mail.

Probably the most telling arguments against the plan are made on the basis of the uncertainty of the mails. In its present condition the image of the postal service hardly favors a quick endorsement of the Presley bill. Still, even that objection is hardly more than muddying the waters with a distorted depiction of the mail service. Few can argue that it has not deteriorated even as it costs have risen but it isn't all that bad. If it were, one shouldn't be entrusting it with the handling of the sample ballots, an essential part of the election process.

Whether the Presley plan should be adopted in to statewide may remain for awhile unsettled but there seems little harm in giving it a try through the pilot project Presley suggests, especially when those in his district are willing testers.

What people say

"I have gradually become aware that my enthusiasm for public service has been waning under the weight of my frustrated hopes, others' unresponsible pressures and the job's persistent demands."

Action Line

To ask help in solving problems with which you have been unsuccessful, write to Action Line, The Progress Bulletin, P.O. Box 2708, Pomona, Calif. 91766. Sign your full name, address and phone number and include copies (not the original) of receipts or other documentation possible. If your letter is published, only your initials will be used.

The Make-a-Plate kit is finally on the way

I have read your paper continuously and noticed the good results you have achieved through your Action Line, so I thought I'd try to get some action also.

In the first week of December I ordered a Make-a-Plate kit from a representative of the Make-a-Plate Division of Wescon Corp. of Massachusetts in Glendora. My children were going to "make" their Christmas gifts.

I have not received my order. On Feb. 6 I sent a letter asking about the whereabouts of my order and the length of time it was taking. My letter was unanswered and not returned.

My order was for one free plate for buying the kit and eight additional plates at $3 each including postage for a total of $24.

I am writing to you as a last resort as my two children are rather upset over the terribly long delay. — M. M., Pomona

Make-a-Plate kits enable young artists to decorate circular paper mats which are molded into melamine plates by the company and then returned to the artist.

When we received your appeal we got out our make-a-letter kit and contacted Wescon.

A spokesman for the firm telephoned to say difficulties had arisen in filling the order but your plates had now been shipped.

We checked with you and learned you had received two of the eight plates. We promised to follow through if the rest are not forthcoming.

* * *

I live in Westmont, Pomona. I have a problem with one family. I am not the only one. Everyone seems to just let everything pass.

Of the five children in the family, two, ages 6 and 4, are trouble makers. I have had my flowers destroyed, bikes, toys and fences damaged and my dog let out.

I have been to the house many times, talked with the parents and been told to go away.

When my children do something to someone else's things, I punish them.

Where do I go for help? The police have been to the family's home many times but nothing has changed. I am sick and tired of having my property destroyed and not being able to keep these kids out of my yard. — N. O., Pomona

We called your complaint to the attention of Richard A. Slaght, interim chief of police.

He immediately sent a field sergeant to talk with you about your problem with your neighbors. The sergeant reported that at that time you could think of only one incident, damage to the handle bars of your child's bicycle.

The officer explained to you parents' responsibilities for acts committed by their children and the procedure of filing a small claims action.

He said he advised you there appears to be no criminal action existing at this time and promised you the Police Department's compiete cooperation should it be required.

As the officer felt any police contact with the children's parents at this time would only aggravate the problem further, he made no such contact.

Thoughts

"Can your courage endure, or can your hands be strong, in the days that I shall deal with you? I the Lord have spoken and I will do it." — Ezekiel 22:14.

"Give us the fortitude to endure the things which cannot be changed, and the courage to change the things which should be changed, and the wisdom to know one from the other." — Bishop Oliver Hart, English clergyman.

For Saturday, March 20, 1976

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Be careful today not to be lavish with an opportunist while passing over one who is truly deserving.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) It might cost you more to do business with friends today than with strangers because of your reluctance to ask for better terms.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) In social situations today you'll draw far more favorable attention by underplaying everything.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You may be tempted to make some decorative changes at home today. Be sure what you buy is something you can live with.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You could be disappointed today if you expect more from loved ones than they are able to deliver. Be reasonable.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) If you're conducting an important matter today where a partner or an associate's involved, spell everything out.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Usually you work well with others, but today you're likely to get better results if you perform your tasks alone.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You may need some self-discipline today to keep extravagant tendencies in check. Don't let temptation override prudence.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You're far more resourceful and have greater resolve than you're apt to credit yourself with today. Challenge awakens the real you.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You may have an opportunity today to do something constructive regarding a secret ambition. Keep your motives to yourself.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Be budget-minded if you're involved in social activities with friends today. Let each pay his fair share.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Goals will not be denied you today if you're prepared to make the proper effort. Give it your very best.

Your Birthday, March 20, 1976

This coming year you are like to put a greater emphasis on partnership arrangements. Wisely selected allies could prove beneficial to collective endeavors.

Husband films her in the nude

Dear Ann Landers: My husband has developed a new hobby. He tries to catch me nude so he can snap pictures of me. I have a good figure, but I don't care to have pictures of my naked body circulated around the shop where he works — which is exactly what is happening.

Matt is an excellent amateur photographer. He used to take great pictures of birds, animals, the neighbors' kids and their pets, but in the last three months he hasn't taken a single picture I can share with the family.

Outside of this loony quirt, Matt is a swell guy. Any suggestions? — Camera Shy

Dear Shy: I'm afraid your options are limited, honey. Start with less walking around the house nude. Next comes locking the door when you're in the buff. And if Matthew Brady still doesn't get the message, you'll just have to break his camera.

Dear Ann Landers: In reference to the question of whether one will be unharmed if he hangs onto a rod across the top or jumps in the air when an elevator crashes:

Since the human body falls at the same rate of speed as the elevator, it will impact just as hard as the elevator. If a person jumps into the air immediately before the elevator hits, he (she) will still hit just as hard, but a fraction of a second later.

To illustrate this point, suspend a glass bottle by a string inside a box, then drop the whole thing off a rooftop. The bottle will hit just as hard regardless.

Technically, all falling bodies on earth fall with the acceleration of gravity and nothing can be done about it, unless one has wings or a rocket to provide an opposing acceleration. — Arlan Keith Andrews, Sc.D., Registered Professional Engineer (Greensboro, N.C.)

Dear Arlan: Thank you for coming up with a simple answer to a complicated question. I knew Dr. Jerome Wiesner, President of M.I.T., was right, but you've explained why.

Dear Ann Landers: I am expecting a baby in approximately four weeks and am worried sick. Why? Because my husband is a terrible driver under ordinary circumstances, but when he is excited or upset he is a menace on the street.

I have recurring nightmares that we are on our way to the hospital and Jack slams into another car or gets hit broadside running a red light. I'm so concerned that I have considered sneaking out of the house and going to the hospital in a taxi. Then the thought occurs to me that if Jack wakes up and finds me gone, he'll be even more of a maniac and kill himself rushing to the hospital.

Is there a solution to this problem that I can't see? Please, Ann, don't suggest that I ask a neighbor or a friend to take me. I believe a woman's husband is the only person who should be on hand for the birth of her first child. — P.G. Lady In Pasadena

Dear Lady: Does your husband know how worried you are? If he doesn't, he should. Ask him as a special favor to promise to call a taxi to drive the two of you to the hospital when the time comes. If he says it's a crazy idea, tell him you know it, but you'll feel ever so much better if he'll grant you this wish. It's the least he can do — and you can tell him I said so.

Women style shear nonsense

From time to Time (magazine, that is), the bright, omniscient newsmag displays its virulent male chauvinism by discussing women's fashions, underlining its attack by illustrating the article.

One of the gratifying things about "the latest styles" is that no one seems to wear them. The "exciting" cuts and colors in exotic fabrics, the sweeping tunics cut down to here and the sauvely tailored pants suits blaze across the pages of the "fashion magazines," whatever they are, and then vanish foreever. The Sac, The Droop, The Glomph, The Midi and The MuuMuu rise like bright, iridescent bubbles through catalogues and department store windows, then pop and are gone.

The latest con of the cloth cutters is something they choose to call "American chic," a suggestion that after all these years American designers have caught up with Paris and Rome in making women look ridiculous. Whatever happened to the League of Nations?

"For the first time the attitude that the American woman has about dressing is the concept most admired and emulated in the world," says Grace Mirabella, editor-in-chief of Vogue. "It is because she is on to something — a certain way and kind of dressing, a demand for ease and a kind of good looks, a simplicity of looks."

If the illustrations in Time are any indication, women are certainly going to get ease with American chic — half the dresses are open to the navel, the other half have no backs. Most high school gym suits are not as revealing.

Ms. Mirabella's remark that "American women are on to something" takes an ominous cast when one views some of the models — a cotton madras jumpsuit excellent for second-story work, Oscar de la Rhenta's flashy rhumba number right out of "Flying Down to Rio," Mary McFadden's open-back tunic over harem pants. The chic of Araby.

Simplicity of good looks? Calvin Klein struts an apron dress and stovepipe pants eminently suitable for leaving a sinking ship. Halston's "Bicentennial statement" is a sari with red and white diagonal stripes making the wearer look like a cross between a peppermint stick and a barber pole. Capraro has come up with a cotton vinyl rainsuit that would make any Rotor-Rooter man envious.

Another nice thing about American chic is that cost-conscious females demand and get jazzy styles for a mere fraction of what they would cost in the Common Market. Blassport offers a crepe-de-chine shirt for only $44; Ralph Lauren's pleated pants retail at $76; John Anthony is giving away a jacket, matching skirt and T-shirt for $210. How can you lose? Except by wearing them.

Well, in this 200th anniversary year of the Birth of a Nation I think it's just peachy that the hot couture of Europe has faded and American women are playing it cool. Nothing so well expresses the spirit of our Founding Fathers as sarongs, stoles, saris, carioca skirts and open-back tunics over harem pants.

American designers have proved, against incredible odds, that when it comes to draping the female form divine in clown costumes, they are chic to chic with the Europeans.

Dr. Lamb

About porous bones in women

DEAR DR. LAMB — I would appreciate anything you can tell me about osteoporosis of the spine. I have not found one thing that really helps this condition.

I was told five years ago that I had this condition and since that time it seems to be getting worse. In the beginning it only affected my back. Now my legs and arms seem to be affected. After my last bad muscle spasm I have suffered almost continuous pain every day.

My orthopedic doctor has me doing exercises, taking hormones and a medicine to relax my muscles. But so far nothing seems to work, at least to my satisfaction.

Some well-meaning friend told me to be very careful not to break my bones as they would splinter and recuperation would take longer than in the usual cases of broken bones. All of this hasn't added one bit to my outlook on this condition.

DEAR READER — Osteoporosis means softening or porous bones. Calcium and actual bone cells disappear causing the bones to be both weak and brittle. This condition strikes one out of four women in the United States after the menopause. It's responsible for the dowager's hump that you've seen in so many older women. That is the raised hump in the thoracic spine which gives the appearance of a modest humpback.

Degeneration can be so bad that vertebrae collapse and there may be major loss of height and considerable deformity.

One of the reasons many older people seem to be susceptible to fractures is because of osteoporosis. That's why a little fall, which wouldn't hurt the younger person, may result in a fractured wrist or even a fractured hip. Many of the fractured hip cases occur in older people because they really have osteoporosis.

The condition is painless in many people. When pain does occur it is usually because of muscle spasms which you described or it may be caused when a vertebra has collapsed and there is a temporary period of severe pain over the collapsed vertebra.

Treatment certainly is not satisfactory. Hormones have been used and may arrest the condition at least for a few years. Some studies suggest fluoride will stop the process and even result in forming new bones. A group of the Mayo Clinic have reported the use of sodium fluoride, calcium and Vitamin D and claim to have gotten encouraging results.

Those who want more information on treatment and management of osteoporosis can send 50 cents for The Health Letter, number 6-10, Osteoporosis: Bone Softening. Send a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for mailing. Address your letter to me in care of the Progress Bulletin, P.O. Box 326, San Antonio, Texas 78292.

Osteoporosis is five times as common in women who do not get enough calcium in their diet. That's why women in the post menopause age should get at least the amount of calcium equivalent to that found in a quart of milk every day. I recommend the fortified skim milk variety to control the fat intake problem. If they can't tolerate milk they should take calcium tablets to be absolutely certain that they are not deficient in calcium.

There are two aspects of exercises for osteoporosis. One is to help maintain posture and gain what benefits you can from increased strength of bones. The other is avoiding the types of exercise which may lead to a fracture of the vertebrae or cause problems. That is why you need help in deciding what kind of exercise program is of benefit to you.

Bridge watchers can recognize the second-rate defender by his plaintive cry: "How was I to know?"

One way to know is to watch your partner's cards and see if he is trying to give you information.

East held the first trick with the ace of diamonds and promptly led the queen of clubs. West signalled as enthusiastically as he could by playing the four spot and East continued with the king. West completed the echo by dropping his deuce, but East was fresh out of clubs and had to let declarer collect the rest of the tricks.

West gave a plaintive cry but no one sympathized with him. The normal way for East to play clubs would have been to lead the king and continue with the queen. Then why did he lead the queen first?

To try to tell his partner that he only held two clubs and wanted his partner to win the second club and give him a ruff. West didn't know, but he might well have worked it out.

Ask the Jacobys

A Canadian reader asks if we would open the bidding in fourth seat with:

♠ x x x ♥ A x ♦ K 10 x x ♣ K 10 x x.

We are not vulnerable and the game is duplicate.

Our answer is a resounding negative. We are far more likely to lose match points than to gain in this situation.

Women shame enemy troops

Question arises as to whether women make good front line soldiers. If just doing their jobs were all there were to it, they'd be fine. There's more, though. Most of the male soldiers who face them as enemies can't stand the notion of being beaten by females. So those enemy troops fight harder against women and hold out longer. Israel found that out. It no longer uses its lady soldiers at the front, and that's why.

That time of day when strong drink hits you hardest is noon, it's said. Has to do with how the inner body clocks tick.

WESTMINSTER ABBEY

Q. "Who can be buried in Westminster Abbey?"

A. Anybody the Abbey deans decide to permit there. Not just noble folk of royal renown. Ever hear of Jack Broughton? He was a prizefighter. They buried him there.

Why the fingernails on the hand that you use most tend to grow the most quickly is obvious, isn't it?

Surveys show only one grownup out of every three can name all four of the first books in the New Testament. And more than half can't name any of them.

LANGUAGE

The word "diligence" comes from the Latin expression meaning "I like." And "indolence" comes from the Latin "to grieve." Our Language man would like to point out the old basic: People appear to be diligent doing what they enjoy, but seem indolent when they're sad. The lingo changes over the years, true enough. But how people act and react doesn't change all that much, and some of these word origins show it.

Again the question arises why most women rack the bathroom tissue so it unwinds down the back of the roll rather than down the front. Nothing to it. When pawing toddlers are turned loose in the bathroom, they can unravel a roll of tissue in nothing flat just by slapping at it, if it unwinds down the front. Young mothers soon learn this, so rack to the back.

Assume the age of the earth is 4.5 billion years. Compress that theoretically into one 24-hour day. In such a relative measurement of time, the human cave dwellers only came alive about a second ago. The last five centuries account for only 1/160ths of a second. And the 50 years you put in on your job amount to a mere 1/1000ths of a second.

Debra Brown wed to Steven Ash

Newly wed Mr. and Mrs. Steven Lee Ash have established a home in Covina, following their marriage at Immanuel Lutheran Church in Chino.

The former Miss Debra Sue Brown is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas E. Brown of 12442 Farndon Place, Chino. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jimmie L. Ash of Mira Loma.

Other attendants were: Miss Tammy Brown, Chino, Kenneth Ash, Mira Loma, flower girl Laurie Brown, Chino, and ring bearer, Jerry Dorough, Chino. Ushers were Gary Brown, Chino and Terry Straw, Riverside.

MRS. STEVEN ASH

Lutheran dinner planned

The Women's Missionary League of Peace Lutheran Church will sponsor a progressive dinner Sunday evening.

The dinner will begin at 4:30 p.m. at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Buzz Swithers. Other courses will be served at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Bates and the Rev. and Mrs. Ed Krueger.

A speaker will address the group at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Dave Henslin. Dessert will also be served here.

The speaker is Mrs. Jeanne Cehrke, director of the new Peace Lutheran Pre-School and Day Care Center which opened in September. She will discuss the proposed program for the school and day care center.

Possibility that the open space controversy in La Verne might be put to a vote of the people was voiced today by Mayor Mike M. Morales.

The suggestion was made after 402 persons signed petitions Monday urging the City Council to freeze all construction on developments for the next four months.

The residents claimed growth was getting out of hand. Some of the petitioners contended that the land could be better used for the preservation of open space.

Morales asked City Manager George Caswell to look into the possibility of a ballot proposition in November that will decide "once and for all whether the people really want to pay for open space."

Meanwhile, Morales asked Caswell to investigate the acquisition of 90 acres of open land from the Metropolitan Water District. He said the land, just south of the Live Oak Reservoir, has been termed surplus by the MWD and is now inhabited mostly by coyotes and rattlesnakes.

Death benefits of $99.3 billion

NEW YORK (AP) — An estimated $9.3 billion was paid in 1975 by life insurance companies to beneficiaries of policyholders who had died.

School to stage musical

A contemporary Bicentennial musical titled "Let George Do It," will be presented by primary grade children at Ontario Christian School Friday at 8 p.m. in the school gym.

Almanac

By The Associated Press

Today is Friday, March 12, the 72nd day of 1976. There are 294 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1938, Germany invaded Austria. The next day, Adolf Hitler announced that Austria would be unified with Greater Germany.

On this date:

In 1664, New Jersey became a British colony as King Charles made a land grant to his brother James, Duke of York.

In 1912, the first parachute jump from an airplane was made by Army Captain Albert Berry at Jefferson Barracks, Mo.

In 1939, Pope Pius XII was elevated to the Roman Catholic Papacy.

In 1940, during World War II, Finland surrendered to the Soviet Union, and a truce was signed in Moscow.

In 1947, President Harry Truman established what became known as the Truman Doctrine to help Greece and Turkey resist Communism.

In 1974, Jordan's King Hussein and President Richard Nixon met in Washington to discuss the Mideast situation and Jordan's request for more military aid.

Ten years ago: General Suharto was sworn in as acting President of Indonesia after President Sukarno had been stripped of authority.

Five years ago: Turkey's conservative government fell after an army ultimatum to quit or face a military takeover.

One Year ago: The Democratic caucus of the U.S. House of Representatives voted against further military aid to Cambodia.

Today's birthdays: Actress and singer Liza Minnelli is 30. Playwright Edward Albee is 48. Former astronaut Walter Schirra is 53.

Thought for today: There cannot be a crisis next week. My schedule is already full — Henry Kissinger in 1974.

Bicentennial footnote: Two-hundred years ago today, an American major reported that he had followed orders and smashed the glass, copper lamps and other equipment at Sandy Hook, N.J., lighthouse to impede British raiders in local waters.

PUC probes utilities

Who's paying for ad?

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A probe has been launched by the state Public Utilities Commission to determine whether utilities should be required to state on each ad whether the utility shareholder or the customer is paying.

The PUC Wednesday ordered seven major California gas and electric utilities to reply within 30 days on their opinions of the disclosure idea.

If enacted, the information on who paid for the ad would be required in newspapers, magazines, all circulars and displays and on radio and television commercials.

Named in the order are Pacific Gas & Electric; Pacific Power & Light; San Diego Gas & Electric; Sierra Pacific Power; Southern California Gas; Southern California Edison, and Southwest Gas.

Baseball news on the upswing

Baseball news has taken a turn for the better.

The Dodgers and Angels have started training. On the local scene, La Verne College and the University of Arizona Wildcats open a three-game series tonight.

Tonight's game is at John Galvin Park in Ontario (7:30 p.m.). But Saturday the action moves to the La Verne campus for two games.

The Leos had Arizona State over for one game last year. Coach Ben Hines got USC on the schedule three years ago. After playing at La Verne the first year, all subsequent games have been at USC.

The year La Verne winds up its regular season against the Trojans with a game at Dedeaux Field, Friday, May 7 (7 p.m.).

The Leopards have a Tuesday, March 30 contest with NCAA Regional Champion Cal State Fullerton.

La Verne and CSF are scheduled at Galvin Park in a 7:30 p.m. game. That afternoon, Hines' crew will host Whittier in an SCIAC contest at La Verne at 3 p.m.

Claremont-Mudd had a game with the University of Wyoming Wednesday (Poly hosts the Cowboys for two Saturday).

Stags play USC

Coach Bill Arce of the Stags also has added USC to the C-M schedule. That game is at Dedeaux Field Monday, May 3 at 7 p.m.

Also on the Stags' schedule are games with U.C. Irvine and Grand Canyon College.

UC Irvine will visit Claremont Wednesday, March 31 (3 p.m.). But the Stags will go on the road for the Grand Canyon game.

It's too bad that the NAIA doesn't have coaches like Arce and Hines administrating its programs at the district, area and national levels.

The playoffs and attendant programs would be run much more efficiently than they have been. The District playoffs last year were farcical at times.

Main problem seems to be that too many people think things are being done as well as they can be.

As long as that attitude prevails, little improvement will be made. However, of necessity one change seems assured this year. The district playoffs apparently will be at Glover Stadium (formerly La Palma Park) in Anaheim.

At least teams won't have to worry about sprinklers coming on during games.

This year the Area Playoffs also are due to be held in Southern California. Last year they were in Portland Oregon. The year before that they were in Lewiston, Idaho. Under the rotating policy, it's Southern California's turn (There are no NAIA schools in the northern part of the state).

With SCIAC power concentrated in La Verne and Claremont, the local schools again should be powerful entrants in the playoffs.

Tark in Supertent

AROUND THE SPORTS BEAT: Roland Ortmayer confirmed it. UNLV coach Jerry Tarkanian will hold a series of four, one-week basketball camps at La Verne this summer.

After three fine games, the Lakers reverted to form Wednesday. They looked listless and lifeless against a Milwaukee club they should have blown out.

Revealing comment by Kareem Abdul Jabbar: "I didn't like it in Milwaukee, but at least they played defense there."

Gene Bartow, UCLA coach, is still sticking his foot in his mouth. Latest Bartow boo boo is to disclaim the advantage UCLA has in having the NCAA regionals at Pauley Pavilion.

The Bruins are 167-3 at Pauley. Come off it coach. You're being ridiculous.

Bartow's record his first year at UCLA is a good one. But from the outset, he has spent way too much time answering critics and acting resentful about the inevitable comparisons to John Wooden. As a result he comes across as a small and uncertain man.

The defunct Southern California Sun scheduled one last fling and failed. There was going to be a "wake" at Disneyland Hotel with Sun players and coaches. But it was cancelled for the same reason the WFL folded. Not enough people were interested in attending.

UCLA, Arizona reach finals

By BILL LANGLEY
PB Sports Editor

LOS ANGELES — There won't be a West showdown after all between UCLA and Nevada Las Vegas.

UCLA will be in Saturday afternoon's championship game all right but the Running Rebels from Las Vegas will be on the sidelines when the NCAA West Regionals championship will be decided Saturday.

Unheralded Arizona earned the right to meet the Bruins on the Pauley Pavilion court at 1:15 p.m. Saturday in a game to be nationally televised by NBC (Channel 4).

In a real barnburner, Arizona outlasted UNLV in a wild 114-109 overtime marathon in Thursday's first game of the semifinals at Pauley Pavilion.

UCLA followed by downing neighboring Pepperdine, 70-61, in a contest which seemed to go a snail's pace after the run and gun action of the opener.

For the second time in the NCAA playoffs, the defending national champion Bruins had a rough time putting away an outmanned opponent.

Underdog Pepperdine had a chance to go ahead when the Waves had the ball trailing 50-49 with 9:45 to go but Marques Johnson blocked Dennis Johnson's shot and Ralph Drollinger scored to give the Bruins a three-point margin.

Pepperdine was never able to get that close again.

"Very few teams have people who can reject the ball like that," said Pepperdine Coach Gary Colson about the block.

"It won't show up in the papers, it won't show up in the box score, but Marques' three blocked shots were the key," Colson continued.

UCLA Coach Gene Bartow admitted his team played poorly but said, "Marques came through at the right time. The key for us might have been our zone press in the first half and David Greenwood's defensive play on Marcos Leite."

Pepperdine had 20 turnovers in the game, 12 in the first half, and Leite, the 6-10 Brazilian star, made only four of 14 shots.

Johnson led the Bruins with 18 points followed by Richard Washington with 16 and Greenwood with 10.

UCLA shot 50 per cent from the floor while Pepperdine could make only 39.7 per cent.

The second contest was strictly anticlimatic after the opener which resembled a backwoods brawl with seven players fouling out and 63 infractions called.

Arizona, a four-point loser at Vegas in December, was featured as a team featuring a strong inside punch but weak from the outside.

The Wildcats were anything but that Thursday night as guards Herman Harris and Jim Rappis combined for 55 points in bombing the Rebels from the outside.

Rappis, who runs the attack, played with a limp all night after suffering a bruised heel in the first half. He pleaded with Coach Fred Snowden to stay in the game and did a great job running the Wildcats.

When Rappis fouled out with 40 seconds left in regulation play, he received a tremendous ovation from the Pauley fans.

"Rappis is the epitome of courage," Snowden said. "He was in great pain but he went out and played his heart out anyway."

The Western Athletic Conference champs would have won the game in regulation time except for a miserable 15-for-32 performance at the charity line.

Harris tied the score at 103-103 with 14 seconds left on the clock when he made the first of an one-and-one but he missed the second shot. UNLV had a last-second shot by Robert Smith but it was off target and the game went into overtime.

Arizona then made 11-of-14 — all of its points — from the line in overtime to wrap up the victory.

"I think this game will get people to notice us," said Snowden, who has turned around the program in Tucson. "When we got here, we couldn't find anything in the papers about us."

Arizona shot a blistering 57.9 per cent from the floor while UNLV, the highest scoring team in NCAA history, could connect on only 43.8. The Wildcats also enjoyed a big 68-46 edge in the rebounding department.

Obviously, Las Vegas Coach Jerry Tarkanian took the defeat hard. His Rebels finished third in the Associated Press rankings and he had high hopes for the national title.

"You have to give Arizona credit," Tark said. "We had the chances and didn't do it. The big thing that hurt us was Eddie Owens fouling out with 11:16 to go."

"In the first half, we played as poorly as we have all year but I thought we were in good shape being only four down," he continued. "They beat the heck out of us on the boards and our press wasn't effective."

Indiana faces sleeping giant

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP)— "If Indiana isn't asleep now, they'll never sleep," said Coach Al McGuire, whose second-ranked Marquette had just won the right to meet No. 1 Indiana in the finals of the NCAA Mideast basketball tournament Saturday.

McGuire said the Warriors looked bad as they edged 10th-ranked Western Michigan 62-57 in the semifinals Thursday night.

"I think the change in weather had something to do with it," he added.

Earlier, Indiana had polished off No. 6 Alabama 74-69 in the tournament's opening game. The Hoosiers were led by Player of the Year Scott May, who poured in 25 points, and by bulky center Kent Benson with 15.

But Benson's biggest contribution was bottling up Alabama's Leon Douglas, who was held to 12 points and seven rebounds, far below the average that led the Crimson Tide to the Southeastern Conference championship.

"The defense dropped back on Douglas and helped out quite a bit," said Benson. "Scott and the rest of the guys did a heck of a job on him."

Marquette's Jerome Whitehead draws the task of trying to handle Benson Saturday afternoon.

"I'll try to do it with quickness," Whitehead said. "He's big, and I don't want to try to win a leaning contest with him. I'll just try to get in front of him and keep him from getting the ball."

But Whitehead couldn't keep Western Michigan's Tom Cutter from getting the ball, and Cutter racked up 21 points and 17 rebounds to lead the losers.

Guards Lloyd Walton had 12 points for Marquette and Butch Lee 16.

"The biggest factor in the game was not being able to shut off their guards from penetrating," said Western Michigan Coach Eldon Miller. "Yoa can't let their guards dribble around your guards and play a man-to-man defense."

Although McGuire was critical of his team's over-all effort, he singled Walton out as one player who had a good night.

The Hoosiers ran out all but 40 seconds and Abernethy went to the line. He missed his free throw. With 14 seconds left, however, he got a chance to redeem himself and capitalized on it by hitting two foul shots.

"When I missed the first one, I was awfully upset," said Abernethy. "Of course I felt the pressure — but it lightened up on the last two, and I judged them from the way I missed the first one."

Alabama, which missed its first seven shots and fell behind 9-0 in the first five minutes of play, staged its comeback in the final 14 minutes after the Hoosiers had established a 54-42 lead on a shot by May, college basketball's Player of the Year.

Then, with Indiana's All-American Kent Benson sitting on the bench with four fouls, the Tide comeback began behind the ball-hogging of guards Anthony Murray and T.R. Dunn.

The Tide got within four with just under 12 minutes remaining, but May quickly converted a three-point play, Quinn Buckner added a basket, and the Hoosiers appeared under control again at 61-52.

Alabama then got points from all five starters and cut the margin to 65-61 with seven minutes left and got even at 67-67 on a jump shot by Dunn with 4:48 to play.

Connors meets Tanner in semis

CARLSBAD, Calif. (AP) — Still unsatisfied with his game, Jimmy Connors advanced Thursday night to the semifinals of the $100,000 Independent Players Association tennis tournament, beating Australia's Ray Ruffels 7-5, 6-2.

Connors, who may have been thinking ahead to his expected showdown with Ilie Nastase, lost the first four games in a row, then narrowly escaped three set points against Ruffels.

Connors will face Roscoe Tanner in the semifinals. Tanner had to fight for his life against Peter Fleming, a 21-year-old amateur from UCLA, going three sets to beat him 6-7, 7-5, 7-6.

Tiant won't report to Bosox

By The Associated Press

For the time being, Marvin Miller stopped pitching and John Gaherin stopped catching. Instead, most of the 24 major league baseball teams opened their camps and equipment trunks Thursday and rolled out the bats, balls, gloves and other necessary paraphernalia as spring training officially began.

But while the players unlimbered winter-idled muscles in an attempt to make up for some of the 2½ weeks of training they missed in the lingering labor hassle, there were a number of recalcitrants, led by veteran pitcher Luis Tiant of the Boston Red Sox.

Some 25 members of the American League champions participated in a brisk 2½-hour workout and Manager Darrell Johnson was so delighted with the proceedings it was almost as though the camps had never been locked.

"Rick Wise, Jim Burton and Reggie Cleveland each pitched 15 minutes of batting practice," Johnson enthused. "Ordinarily they wouldn't be able to do that until in camp 12 or 13 days, so actually they're about two weeks ahead."

Never before had 2½ weeks of nothing doing been wiped out so quickly.

However, Tiant remained at his Massachusetts home and said he wouldn't head south until the Red Sox extend his contract. The club's ace hurler, who won 18 games during the regular season, one in the playoffs and two more in the World Series, has one-season remaining on a two-year, $100,000-ayear pact.

"I wanted a three-year contract last year, but they told me the Red Sox never give contracts longer than two years. Now they have given them and I want one."

Wise and Bill Lee have signed for three years, Carl Yastrzemski is believed working on a three-year contract and Fred Lynn, Carlton Fisk and Rick Burleson reportedly have been offered long-term pacts.

"Luis feels very strongly about this," said his lawyer, Bob Woolf. "He insists he will not go to Florida until this is straightened out. I've been talking with the Red Sox and I'm hopeful things can be worked out."

A former Bostonian, outfielder Juan Beniquez, was missing from the Texas Rangers' camp. Beniquez was believed to be somewhere in his native Puerto Rico.

"We may have trouble running him down, but we'll get him eventually," said general manager Danny O'Brien.

Not all pitchers were as eager as the Red Sox.

"I'm not going to be ready to throw in any kind of game for 10 to 12 days," said Oakland relief ace Rollie Fingers. "It's going to take four or five weeks for me to get in shape to throw three innings."

The first exhibition games apparently will be played next Tuesday when the Pittsburgh Pirates meet the Chicago White Sox and the New York Yankees face the Texas Rangers.

Gene Mauch, new manager of the Minnesota Twins, staged an opening day 3½-hour workout which most observers agreed was the longest in recent memory.

"I don't think you can tire them out mentally and, as far as I'm concerned, we've got a lot of learning to do up here," Mauch said, pointing to his head.

While the players were working out, the owners' player relations committee was scheduled to meet today in New York to reassess its position.

"I look out and feel unrest," said general manager Joe McDonald of the New York Mets after watching the club's initial practice with 21 players on hand. "I don't know if they're Mets or free agents."

Gabe Paul, president of the Yankees, had a different opinion. "I see a bunch of Yankees, not free agents," he said.

Melton to be Angels' DH

HOLTVILLE, Calif. (AP) — The Angels have decided to use Bill Melton primarily as a designated hitter and keep Dave Chalk at third base.

At the Angels' first spring workout Thursday, California Manager Dick Williams said Melton, who is also a third baseman, will be "working out a bit at third, a bit at first, and a lot in the batting cage."

Melton came to the Angels from the Chicago White Sox.

As spring training began, pitchers Nolan Ryan and Dick Drago and catcher Ellie Rodriguez were among those not in camp. Thirty roster players took part in the workout.

Pitcher Gary Ross, acquired over the winter from the Padres, was hit on the forearm by a line drive. X-rays proved negative, and a club spokesman said Ross probably would not have to miss any drills.

A spokesman said the club hopes to open its cactus league season against Cleveland in Tucson, Ariz., on Wednesday. The Angels cancelled exhibition games against the Chicago Cubs Monday and Tuesday in Palm Springs.

La Verne plays Arizona tonight

By DON BRADLEY
PB Staff Writer

Highlight of the La Verne College home baseball schedule is at hand.

The Leopards (5-9) host the University of Arizona (23-9) tonight (7:30 p.m.) at Ontario's John Galvin Park. The two teams will play a doubleheader at La Verne Saturday starting at noon.

The Wildcats are led by former major leaguer Jerry Kindall. Kindall received what was then a big bonus ($50,000) from the Chicago Cubs after graduating from the University of Minnesota.

He spent four years with the Cubs, then was traded to the American League Cleveland Indians and finished his career with the Minnesota Twins.

He coached at the University of Minnesota before coming to Arizona. His best year so far was 1974 when the Wildcats posted a 58-6 mark. Last year they won 43, lost 13.

This year they are 23-9. "It's a pretty good record against tough competition," Kindall said. However, we've had some distressing injuries."

One departure for the Arizona series is that there will be an admission charge for the games.

"We have to guarantee Arizona a certain amount of money for coming over here and playing," explained coach Ben Hines. "We're not trying to make any money, only meet expenses. So we're going to charge $2.00 for adults and $1.00 for everybody else."

The Wildcats are led by centerfielder Dave Stegman. As of Tuesday Stegman was averaging a sizzling .441 with 25 runs batted in and nine stolen bases.

First baseman Pete Van Horne is hitting .325, has hit five home runs and batted in 26 runs. One of his homers was hit against the Leos on the Arizona trip.

Leftfielder Don Zimmerman is hitting .367 and is the Wildcats' leadoff hitter. The cleanup batter is catcher Ron Hassey. Hassey is averaging .303 with 22 RBIs.

Arizona lost second baseman Les Pearcy, a .340 hitter, while playing at San Diego State last weekend. Pearcy suffered a ruptured upper thigh muscle when he collided with shortstop Glen Wendt.

Pearcy is expected to be out at least a month. Wendt returned to action Monday wearing a neck brace. But he had to be taken out of the game after complaining of headaches.

"We're really hanging in there now," said Arizona coach Jerry Kindall. We've brought up two kids from the jayvees. We lost our regular third baseman, Bill Simpson, with a fractured thumb before we made this trip. So the injuries to Pearcy and Wendt are the most distressing thing about this trip."

Simpson was hitting .357 at the time he was injured. Kindall has had to switch Hassey back to the third base position he occupied last year. Senior Al Lopez, a reserve the last two years, has taken over most of the catching chores.

Robin Carlsen, one of the jayvees called up, has taken over Pearcy's spot at second. The other, Rick McConnell, is Wendt's back up. Another reserve, Lynn Garrett (.292) has seen quite a bit of action and initially replaced Simpson at third.

Former MSAC star Bob Chaulk got off to a fast (4-0) start but has been bothered by a sore elbow. Chaulk came down with the flu Monday but pitched five innings against USC Thursday.

The Wildcats started their California trek a week ago. Thursday in San Diego. They split four games with San Diego State. Monday they won an afternoon game from Pepperdine in 15 innings then lost, 5-0 Monday night to UCLA.

Wednesday and Thursday, they suffered back-to-back one-run losses at USC.

VMI ready for Rutgers

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP)— There were two things Coach Bill Blair didn't believe after Virginia Military's incredible Keydets gained the championship game of the NCAA East Regional basketball tournament with Rutgers' unbeaten fourth-ranked Scarlet Knights.

The first was the fact the Keydets, one of the best foul shooting teams in the nation, hit only 50 per cent at the free throw line Thursday night in a 71-66 overtime upset over 17th-ranked DePaul after Rutgers methodically wore down Connecticut 93-79.

"And there was this guy who had the nerve to ask if we were a Cinderella team," said Blair, whose Keydets blew an 11-point lead with 2½ minutes left in regulation before winning. "All I know is we're one of only eight left."

And Southern Conference champion VMI, 22-9, will be the only unranked team of the eight regional finalists when it goes against Rutgers, 30-0, at 12:15 p.m. Saturday for the championship of the East and a berth in the March 27 NCAA semifinals at Philadelphia.

There was a touch of the unreal in both Thursday night games.

VMI, which now has won its last 10 games with the emphasis on accuracy from the foul line, missed the front end of 11 one-and-one situation in the second half to let DePaul get even, then sank the Blue Demons by hitting its first seven foul shots in overtime.

And Rutgers didn't get a point from All-American Phil Sellers until 2:09 of the second half had gone by. Sellers wound up with only eight points but freshman Abdel Anderson came off the bench to score 19 and sophomore reserve Steve Hefele threw in 14 more.

"That was a rare exhibition of foul shooting. It was so bad I thought the crowd was gonna leave,"'said Blair. As for the reason, Blair said,"It was just a chain reaction. One missed and they all started missing."

Rutgers Coach Tom Young couldn't believe his team scored 53 points in the first half and led by just six.

"When you score 53 points, you figure you should be up at least 10 points," said Young.

But Connecticut, which finished with a 19-10 record, shot 58.1 per cent from the floor in the first half.

"We just told the kids to keep playing the way you've been playing. We felt they couldn't do that for 40 minutes," said Young.

The Huskies couldn't, falling off to 28.6 per cent in the second half.

Al Weston had 24 points and Tony Hanson 23 for the Huskies, and the loser's John Thomas led all rebounders with 19.

The Scarlet Knights broke the game open by outscoring the Huskies 26-10 over a span of 10:41 after Connecticut had pulled to within 57-53 with 3:01 gone in the second half. Dabney, Sellers, Anderson and Hefele had 6 points each in the run.

Young said Sellers, who was four of 13 from the floor, "is getting the shots he wants. He's just not knocking them in. But he does so many things for us. I think he's due for a good one."

Charlotte, Kentucky in finals

NEW YORK (AP) — They played "Beat The Clock" at Madison Square Garden—and Kentucky and North Carolina-Charlotte did just that.

Those college basketball teams advanced to the finals of the 39th National Invitation Tournament with two incredible finishes in Thursday night's semifinals.

Kentucky twice lost big leads and had all but lost the first game before Larry Johnson's dramatic field goal at the buzzer provided a tingling 79-78 victory over Providence.

North Carolina-Charlotte needed a basket by Melvin Watkins with 30 seconds remaining to stop North Carolina State 80-79 in an intense battle of intrastate rivals.

That set the stage for Sunday's championship game between two teams that did not figure to reach the finals.

"This is a mountaintop experience," said North Carolina-Charlotte Coach Lee Rose, whose 49ers clearly are the Cinderella team of this week-long tourney.

Before whipping North Carolina State, the unheralded 49ers scored upset victories over the University of San Francisco and Oregon in their first visit to the NIT.

"The game boiled down to a tip-in," said a deeply disappointed Norm Sloan, the North Carolina State coach. "If one of them went in, we would have won."

Sloan's reference was to the frantic finish after Watkins had put North Carolina-Charlotte into the lead with his dramatic shot. North Carolina State had a crack at winning the game at the end, but missed several shots inside. The ball hung on the basket for a second or two, then spilled off as the final buzzer went off.

"I don't see how the ball didn't go in," said Rose, who appeared to have someone unearthly on his side in the last seconds.

"We didn't have a last-second shot player in there," Sloan offered, referring to the fact that star forward Kenny Carr had fouled out earlier. "As it was, I'm pleased we stayed with them like we did."

Notre Dame ousted, Dantley may leave

LOUISVILLE (AP) — All-American forward Adrian Dantley has played in three NCAA basketball tournaments, but his Notre Dame team has failed to reach the region finals in any of those years.

After Notre Dame's 80-76 loss to Michigan in a Midwest Region semifinal Thursday, Dantley said he may not be around for another try, although he still has a year of eligibility remaining.

"I'd say it's about 50-50 that I'll go pro," Dantley said shortly after the game. "I haven't made my decision yet.

"I love Notre Dame and I love college ball, but I'll do what my gut feeling tells me," said Dantley. "It's not only the money. That was there last year. There's a lot of things to consider. We'll wait and see."

If the loss to Michigan was Dantley's last game, it was one to remember. The bulky junior from Washington, D.C., powered in 31 points, including a fistful during a pair of surges that gave Notre Dame, 23-6, sizeable but shortlived leads.

Michigan, also 23-6, overcame an 11-point first half deficit, finally winning the game on Steve Grote's two free throws with 27 seconds left. The leader of the comeback was slick shooting Rickey Green, who scored 16 of his 20 points in the second half.

The victory moves Michigan into Saturday's finals against Missouri, 26-4, which used Willie Smith's 30 points to dump Texas Tech 86-75 in the other semifinal.

"I think the key things in the game for us were that we played more aggressive defense in the second half and we held our own on rebounds," said Michigan Coach Johnny Orr.

That defense passed a severe test in the late going when Wayman Britt, who had matched muscles with Dantley throughout, fouled out with 8:46 left in the game. But Dantley scored only four points the rest of the way and was blanked the final 4:04.

"Adrian was well covered the last part of the game, and the other players had shots they just had to take," said Notre Dame Coach Digger Phelps.

Dantley's final basket gave Notre Dame its last lead at 70-69, but Michigan jumped on top to stay 20 seconds later when Phil Hubbard hit a 10-foot jumper.

Notre Dame, victimized by 23 turnovers, saw its last chance bounce away when Don Williams dribbled the ball off his leg and out of bounds with 13 seconds left.

Texas Tech, 25-6, made a game of it against Missouri for about 11 minutes, taking a 25-22 lead as center Rick Bullock poured in 12 of his 23 points in the first 11 minutes.

But the Tigers began to pull away at that point when Smith, held to a single basket as Tech built its brief lead, hit six long jumpers in the next seven minutes to put Missouri ahead 41-31.

Missouri built the lead to 55-38 lead four minutes into the second half and, although Tech pulled within 77-70 in the late going, the Tigers were in firm control the rest of the way.

Football labor talks resume

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A show of good faith may have brought progress in the stalemated and often hostile contract negotiations between the National Football League clubs and their players.

Both commissioner Pete Rozelle of the NFL and Dick Anderson, the Miami Dolphins defensive back who is new president of the Players Association, said after an amiable session Thursday that they hoped talks could resume next week.

For two years, there has been no collective bargaining agreement between the owners and players who have been battling in the courts.

A breakthrough was seen in Anderson's statement that all issues in the dispute should be negotiated. This presumably would include the so-called Rozelle Rule of compensation for a team losing a player who plays out the option year of his contract and thus becomes a free agent.

Under the rule, which has been held illegal by courts in Minneapolis and San Francisco, the team signing such a free agent must compensate the club which has lost him.

Anderson said he and fellow members of the players executive committee — Fred Willis of Houston and Jack Youngblood of Los Angeles — came to the Hotel del Coronado to show their good faith that contract negotiations could resume.

Rozelle said he could not recall any such effort in the past.

"We did not come to sit down and bargain at this time," Anderson said. "It is just a good faith gesture on our part and to show we want to sit down for better communications. The owners are still in their annual meeting. We do hope we can get together in the next week."

Earlier, the owners turned down a suggestion that instant replay tape be used by officials before determining crucial plays.

But Jim Kensil, executive director of the league, said owners decreed the instant replays should be studied further.

George Allen, coach of the Washington Redskins, was the prime mover seeking use of instant replays. Also defeated was his bid to give the commissioner power to have games totally or fractionally replayed in case of controversial plays.

Allen's Redskins lost to the St. Louis Cardinals in overtime last fall in a game which was tied in the final seconds of regulation play on a pass catch by Mel Gray. Allen claimed it was not a legal catch and that instant replays supported his contention.

The league also decreed that all games must be played to a conclusion, a rule brought about because of a 24-16 victory in San Diego last fall when the Chargers beat New York's Jets. There was no try for an extra point after the final San Diego touchdown as fans rushed onto the field.

Although that game had no bearing in the playoff picture, Kensil said that points for and against contending teams could make a difference in the site of playoff battles.

Local JCs score conference wins

Mt. San Antonio, Citrus and Chaffey all scored conference wins in JC baseball action Thursday.

MSAC bested South Coast Conference foe Fullerton 7-2, Citrus downed Mission Conference rival San Bernardino 8-6 and Chaffey edged M.C. member Riverside City College 3-2.

Mountie righthander Bob Veselic, with ninth-inning relief help from Ron Roenicke, downed Fullerton for MSAC's first conference win after two losses. Overall, MSAC is now 9-5-1 on the year.

The visiting Hornets had taken a 2-0 lead in the top of the second in Jim Christiansen's solo homer and an unearned tally, but the Mounites roared back.

Danny Gans' fourth-inning triple, which scored Roenicke, tied the game at 2-2. Gans scored himself moments later on Forest Brown's fly ball, giving the Mounties a lead they never relinquished.

An RBI single by Oro Neconie and a scoring fly ball by Roenicke in the fifth pushed the Mounties advantage to 5-2, and they scored twice more in the eighth to ice the win.

Roenicke came on in relief of Veselic with no outs in the ninth and two Hornets aboard and retired three straight batters to end the game. Veselic surrendered six hits, fanned four and walked five in his eight innings-plus of work.

Gans had two hits and two runs scored for MSAC, while Larry Marsh also had two safeties.

Citrus built up a big 8-2 lead over San Bernardino's ace lefty Bill Stanfield and held off a ninth-inning Indian uprising to post the Mission win.

The Owls are now 4-0 in conference and 12-3 overall. SBVC is now 2-2 in Mission outings.

Joe Samsom slugged a home run for the victors, while Worth Valentine had three hits and Dave Hostetler two RBIs in the win. Bonita High product Rich Ortega added a triple to the 12-hit Owl attack.

Chaffey hurlers Kenny Shea and Virgil Moore combined for a three-hitter as the Panthers edged RCC.

Shea allowed only two hits in 6 and 1/3 innings, while Moore finished up with a one-hit relief job over the final two and 2/3 frames.

The Panthers scored the winning tally in the top of the fifth. Joe Bruno and Larry Jones led off that frame with singles, and executed a double steal.

Thompson had doubled in a run earlier in the contest, while Bob Branchetti had a sacrifice fly for the locals. Thompson and Rick Munoz each had two hits.

The win gives Chaffey a 2-2 conference and 8-8 overall mark.

All three teams will return to the diamond wars Saturday afternoon. MSAC will travel to Orange Coast for a noon start, Riverside will be at Citrus in a 1 p.m. encounter and Chaffey will entertain San Bernardino, also at 1 p.m.

FINAL TURN — Claremont High's Blake Wood rounds the last bend on the way to victory in two mile race against visiting Garey Wednesday. Wood also won mile but Garey won meet.

Cole, Webster star

By MIKE BROSSART
PB Staff Writer

Garey High freshman Morris Cole ran the San Antonio League's first sub-ten-second mile of the year Thursday in a dual meet at Claremont, but was upstaged by the long jump contest as the Vikings outpointed the Wolfpack, 72-46.

Stanley Webster of Garey leaped 22 feet, 8 inches to win the event while teammate Greg Garrett went 22-5 and Claremont's Derek Mowell followed at 21-11.

Mowell seemed to be comfortably in second place in the event until Garrett made his last jump his best. Those three marks represent the top three prep long jumps in the valley this year.

Garrett won the high jump at 6-3 and Mowell was runnerup in that event at 6-2.

Cole's time of 9.9 seconds in the 100-yard dash was the highlight of the running events, with Claremont's Derek Britton and Rick Swetnam finishing second and third.

The Garey freshman came back to win the 220 in 22.3 with Webster second and Britton third.

Webster also won the 330 low hurdles in 40.1. Claremont hurdler Doug Maxwell did not enter the lows because he is suffering from the flu, but he ran in and won the 120 highs in 15.6.

Blake Wood scored the only double win of the day for Claremont, running the mile in 4:44.0 and the two mile in 10:12.5. Claremont freshman Lock Breaux was second in the two mile at 10:24.

Garey's Jim Orr, another flu sufferer, placed second in the mile but did not run in the longer race.

Garey won both relays handily — with help from a bad Claremont pass in the 440. Tori Shepherd picked up the remaining Viking win with a time of 52.6 in the quarter-mile.

Britton won the shot put with a heave of 45-9, while teammate Dee Dillon took pole vault honors at 12-6 and 'Pack half-miler John Halladay won in 2:02.6.

"We lost some points we were expecting in the 100," said Garey coach Ernie Prentice after the meet, "but we gained some points we weren't counting on in the pole vault."

"The flu cost us some points," said Lynn, "since we didn't have Maxwell in the lows, Dennis McCutcheon in the mile and two mile and Dennis Hyer in the 440 relay. That's why we had the bad handoff.

Garey, 2-0, will travel to Upland, 2-0, next week while Claremont, 1-1, visits Chino, 0-2.

"It will be very close," predicted Prentice of the Vikings meet with the Highlanders. "I figure we'll win by something in the range of 65-55, but when you're only giving yourself 10 points you know it's tight."

Garey nabs SAL baseball victory

Garey High nabbed a 7-6 win Thursday over Ganesha in a San Antonio League baseball contest which had been suspended on Tuesday due to darkness.

The two teams had played nine innings Tuesday to a 6-6 deadlock, but it took only one inning Thursday afternoon to settle the issue.

Ganesha loaded the sacks with one away in the top of the 10th (the first inning played Thursday), but Garey relief hurler David Rondero came in to fan one Giant batter and get the third out on a fly to the outfield.

The Vikings then tallied in the last of the inning to end things.

Garey, now 1-0 in SAL action and 3-2-2 overall, was scheduled to play at Claremont today. Ganesha, 0-1 and 3-2-2, was set to host Chino. Both those games featured 3:15 p.m. starts.

Kids' wrestling slated at MSAC

Boys from 7 to 14 years old will be registering Saturday morning for the spring session of kid's wrestling at Mt. San Antonio College. All boys in the MSAC district are eligible.

Registrations for the various age groups will be held in Gym 27A starting at 8 a.m. A nomianl fee of $2 is payable for this recreation program at the time of registration.

All boys are asked to wear tennis shoes, shorts and t-shirts, and bring a light-weight sweater or sweat shirt. Clothing with metal buckles, buttons, or snaps will not be allowed.

Youngsters will learn the intricate art of wrestling every Saturday morning to May 15. Additional practice time will also be held on Tuesday evenings from 6 to 7 in the same gym.

SAL track roundup

Devils just miss blank

Pomona High, Upland and Ganesha posted easy wins in Thursday's San Antonio League track action, with the Red Devils' victory margin almost — but not quite — as large as it could be.

Damien's Larry Dutcher took third place in the shot put with a heave of 50 feet, 7 inches to score the Spartans only point in a 116-1 loss to defending league champion Pomona.

That event, however, was dominated as usual by Pomona's Hank Zibell, heaved the shot 61 feet, just four inches shy of his school record-setting performance of a week ago.

Red Devil distance runner Barry Boetcher scored his usual double victory in the mile (4:33.1) and two mile (9:51.5).

In other SAL meets, Upland downed Montclair, 77-40, and Ganesha topped Chino, 70-33.

Upland's Dave Stephenson scored a double in the 100 (10.4) and 220 (24.2) and the Highlanders relegated Montclair's Mike Roza to second place in the mile and two mile.

Casey Cox edged Roza by a step in the mile (4:29.2) and Roger Innes beat the Cavalier distance runner in the two mile (9:57.7).

Montclair's Mike Gray went 22-4½ in the long jump while Upland's Cliff Juell cleared 13 feet to win the pole vault.

Floyd Eddings won the long jump (22-3½), 120-yard high hurdles (15.1) and 330 lows (41.3) to pace the Giants' win over Chino. Ganesha hurdler Lloyd Jones did not compete.

Saints, Jags stay atop HL

San Dimas and Ontario remained tied for the lead in Hacienda League track with victories Thursday while Alta Loma and Walnut stayed right behind.

San Dimas beat Sierra Vista, 87-31, Ontario dumped Bonita, 90-27, Walnut topped Royal Oak, 69-49, and Alta Loma defeated Gladstone, 67-51.

The Saints and the Jaguars are 2-0 league meets, Alta Loma and Walnut are each 1-0-1 and Bonita is 1-1. The remaining three teams are 0-2.

Scott Carter and Chuck Simmons each scored two victories to lead the Mustangs past Royal Oak. Carter won the 880 and the two mile. Simmons won both hurdle events, breaking his own school record of 41.8 seconds in the 330-yard lows with a 41.4 clocking.

Walnut's Tim Ball trimmed three seconds off the school mile record with a 4:33.0, but lost the race to Royal Oak's Doug Moore at 4:32.1.

It was Walnut's first track victory over the Romans in seven years.

Perry LaMont won the 880 and mile as his Saints overpowered the Dons in spite of wins in the 220, 330 low hurdles and long jump by Sierra Vista's Mike Campa.

San Dimas' Sonny LaFargue put the shot 53-1. He set a school record last week at 54-5½.

Ontario's Elijah Bishop won the 100, 220 and 440 and Bonita's Mike Green took the 880, mile and two mile as the Jags outpointed the Bearcats.

Dave Toupal won both hurdle events and the high jump to lead the Braves' victory over Gladstone.

Next week Alta Loma will be at San Dimas, Ontario will visit Walnut, Bonita will travel to Gladstone and Royal Oak will be at Sierra Vista.

Pomona sponsors soccer tournament

The Pomona Park and Recreation Department is sponsoring its annual 8-A-Side Soccer Tournament Saturday, March 27, at Washington Park.

The tournament, divided into three classes, will start at 10 a.m. at the park, Grand and Towne Ave.

The classes are as follows: class A — seventh and eighth (may not have reached 15th birthday by Dec. 2, 1975); class B 8 fifth and sixth (may not have reached 13th birthday by Dec. 2, 1975); Class C — third and fourth (may not have reached 11th birthday by Dec. 2, 1975).

A player desiring to go up a division may do so but one may not go down. In otherwords, a person in the C division can participate in the B division. A person can not go up two divisions.

Entries must be submitted to the recreation office no later than 5 p.m., Monday. Complete rosters for the team must also be submitted at that time.

Changes will be allowed on a team prior to the first tournament game. A team must be composed of at least eight players but no more than 12.

The roster must include the first and last name of each player, their birthdate, and current school. It must also include the name, address and phone number of each coach.

Rules for the 8-A-Side Soccer may be picked up in the recreation office between 8:15 a.m. and 5:15 p.m. Monday through Friday.

The number of games and format will be dictated by the number of teams.

Boat drags slated

Records are made to be broken and officials of the National Drag Boat Assn. look for a number of world standards to be shattered at the season's first competition, the Kidney Foundation Benefit at Long Beach Marine Stadium.

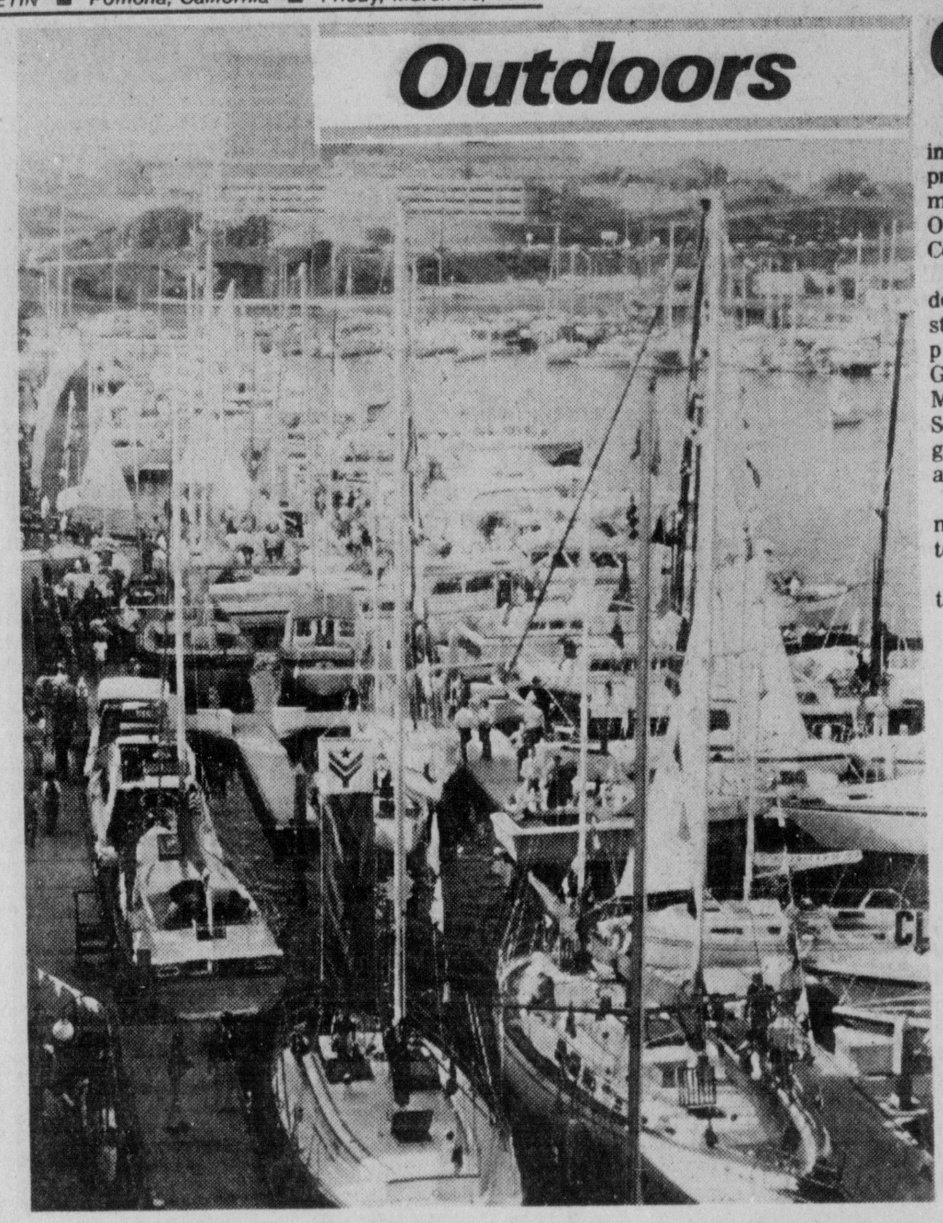

Not only will there be current record holders in virtually every class on hand, but five barefoot skiers who have tied or exceeded the record will be on hand Saturday and Sunday, including Gordon Epling of Long Beach, who holds the mark at 93.38 miles per hours.

When the drag boaters went into action at Lake Ming, Bakersfield, recently, four drivers exceeded 180 miles per hour with Mike DuBiel, Santa Ana, winning the event with 185.18 clocking. Dennis Pollaccia of Redondo Beach had the top speed of 189.47 mph in Hondo's After Shock. Kenny West, Fresno and Tom Hefforon, La Cresenta, were both over 180 mph.

Canoga Park fireman, Al Bush has already upped the blown fuel flat-bottom standard to 161.28 mph in Crazy Horse. Bakersfield's Larry Briscoe won both earlier races in the unblown gas hydro class and Bob (Who) Clark, Orange, had a leg up on his own unblown fuel flatbottom record before his engine went wrong.

Sacramento's George Crowle has a pair of victories to his credit in the unblown fuel hydro category. Jim Van Dyke, La Cresenta, won both races in the new NDBA blown alcohol hydro class.

IN-THE-WATER BOAT SHOW — Some 300 boats will be on display this weekend at the Newport Harbor Boat Show. Included will be the largest collection of yachts ever assembled in the West. The show runs through Sunday, with a powerboat show set to begin March 24.

DFG issues reminder on abalone opening

Although the sport abalone season opened Tuesday south of Monterey County's Yankee Point, new regulations this year delay opening of the season along the north coast until April 1.

The Department of Fish and Game points out that the new regulations, which became effective March 1, also contain reduced daily limits and create a special seven-month season for the northeasterly side of Catalina Island.

South of Yankee Point the season will close next Jan. 14.

To the north the season will be open in April, May, June, be closed in July and reopen for August, September, October and November.

The new daily limit has been reduced from five to four in any combination of species.

Legal minimum sizes remain the same: seven inches for red abalones; six inches for green, pink, and white abalones; five inches for black abalones and four inches for all other species.

All undersize abalones must be returned immediately to the rock from which they were taken, and abalone brought ashore must not be removed from their shells until they are being prepared for immediate consumption.

The rules also require people to keep all the legal size abalones they pick until they have taken their limits. This new rule is intended to prevent people from continuing to pick abalones after they have reached their limit in order to exchange smaller, although legal size, abalones for larger ones.

On Catalina Island the open season runs from March 16 to Jan. 14, except for the northeasterly side between the west end and the government lighthouse on the southeast end and where the season is April 1 to October 1.

Comments sought on plan

Public comments are being sought this month on a proposed plan for management of tule elk in the Owens Valley in Inyo County.

The proposals have been developed through a joint study conducted by the Department of Fish and Game, the Bureau of Land Management, U.S. Forest Service and the Los Angeles Department of Water and Power.

—Limit the elk in each of the six herds to numbers in balance with available habitat;

—Undertake habitat improvement and development projects in areas occupied by five of the six herds in the valley;

—Limit off-road vehicle use in areas critical to the welfare of the elk;

—Re-evaluate livestock grazing practices in the valley and, if necessary, establish new practices to conform with sound range management guidelines;

—Recommend withdrawal from mining uses of federal lands indentified as important calving areas; and —Assist agricultural land owners in lessening crop depredation caused by elk. Improved fencing and hearding would be considered in this category.

Copies of the 120-page plan are being sent to key governmental agencies, and additional copies have been sent to branches of the Inyo County Free Library in Bishop, Big Pine, Independence and Lone Pine where they will be available to interested persons after Monday.

Additional copies of the plan will be available at the Bureau of Land Management offices at the Round Valley Ecology Center in Inyo County; Forest Services offices at 2957 Birch St. and 798 North Main St. in Bishop and at the Forest Service office in Lone Pine.

Department of Fish and Game offices at 407 West Line St. in Bishop; 350 Golden Shore in Long Beach and in the Resources Building, 1416 Ninth St., Sacramento also will have copies which can be seen by interested persons.

Written comments on the plan should be addressed to the Department of Fish and Game office in Bishop and they should be submitted before April 9, according to the DFG. No public hearings are planned at this time.

Present state laws prohibit hunting of the tule elk until the total population in the state reaches at least 2,000 animals.

At present there are four elk herds in California — the Owens Valley herd, which contains from 400 to 425 elk; a herd of about 60 animals at the Tupman Elk Preserve in Kern County; a free-roaming herd of 110-140 elk in the Cache Creek area in Calousa County; and 15 to 20 elk on San Luis Island near Los Banos in Merced County.

When the first explorers came to California they found tule elk in large numbers in the San Joaquin Valley and adjoining foothills. They also were found in coastal areas, including the Monterey and Pt. Reyes areas.

Following the discovery of gold in California large numbers of elk were killed to meet the demand for food and hides created by the influx of settlers and miners. In addition the widespread conversion of elk habitat into agricultural lands also contributed to the decrease of elk numbers in the state.

In 1873 a state law was passed making it a felony to kill an elk. In the San Joaquin Valley land baron Henry Miller ordered complete protection for all elk on his lands, and by 1914 there were more than 400 elk in the San Joaquin Valley.

In subsequent years, many of these animals were relocated in other parts of the state, but only the transplant to the Cache Creek area was successful.

Frog taking banned

The California Fish and Game Commission has voted to ban commercial taking of frogs for human consumption, completing a series of actions that began with the reduction of the short harvest and then sharply restricted the commercial collection for scientific and educational purposes.

The commission action, taken Friday at a meeting in Fresno, was requested by the Department of Fish and Game. It was directed against commercial collection who are charged, among others, with depleting the bullfrog resource in several areas of the state.

In addition to outlawing commercial collection of bullfrogs for human consumption, the commission regulation bans possession, sale, transport and export of frogs for this purpose.

The regulation does not apply to frogs raised by licensed domesticated fish breeders or persons importing frogs, but dealers possessing frogs for human consumption will be required to maintain records and make them available on request to the DFG.

Outlawing the trade in domestic frogs will not leave residents and markets without frogs, the DFG said, because these still will be available from domestic fish breeders and from sources in states such as Louisiana and in countries such as Japan, India and Mexico.

Commissioners also authorized publication of notice of their intention to require persons issuing licenses, certificates, permits and tags for the DFG to date them at the time of issuance.

The department seeks the change to assist wardens in enforcing regulations which prohibit the use of undated licenses and pre-dated or post-dated licenses. Current regulations do not fix repsonsibility for dating such documents.

In other action, the commission approved an amendment to the California Administrative Code authorizing the DFG to collect fees for vacuum or suction dredge permits.

The fees — $4 for permits for which inspections are not required and $75 for those requiring inspection — were authorized under the 1975 legislation and have been collected since Jan. 1, 1976. The change brings the Code into Conformance with the law.

EVINRUDE 55
The most motor for most families.

Evinrude's new 55 horsepower twin can satisfy everybody. The fishermen in the morning, the skiers in the afternoon, and the moonlight cruisers at night.

What makes the 55 so versatile is its sophisticated tuning, which adds exceptional performance across a broad power range. It's a powerful ski motor, a gas-miserly engine at cruising speeds, and a smooth, quiet trolling companion.

The 55 comes with all the deluxe features you've come to expect from Evinrude, including our low-drag, high speed Nitro series gearcase. And when you get the best of Evinrude, you get the best of everything.

Your Evinrude dealer invites you and your family to stop in and look at the new 55 and the whole line-up of 1976 Evinrudes.

Home and garden

Pots and plants

Don't underestimate watering of plants

By JANET TARA
(Fourth of a Series)

It's best to have one person responsible for the watering of plants. If you have more than one eager gardener in your family, divide the plants equally and make sure each person is responsible for the plants in her or his territory. That goes for regular washing, inspecting for diseases and fertilizing.

If you have a hard time keeping track of which plants need watering once a week, once every other day or once every two weeks, try to group the plants according to pot size and type. To aid your memory, group all plastic potted plants in one area or room; all of the same or similar size, variety and type on one windowsill. Coordinate groups with light requirements.

Big plants pose a more complex watering problem. It's best to have them in pots with drainage holes that will tell you when you have watered enough. Overwatering is very easy with plants in enclosed containers. Try keeping a log book for big plants to help determine when they need watering, but always do the finger test too. Push your finger gently in about one inch to test for dry soil. Then water if necessary.

Always water thoroughly. Don't tease plants with little bits of water each day. Little bits of water cause a plant to grow fitfully as it tries to reach water just beyond its roots. Uneven watering inhibits proper growth.

Here's the answer

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q. — I notice that in some liquid floor polishes, the directions say to mix well before using, while others say they should never be mixed. I assume that each manufacturer knows what he is talking about, but can you tell me why this is so?

A. — Products which contain a solvent require mixing so that the waxes in the liquid will mix well with the solvent. A water-based liquid polish should not be shaken because, when it is, a foaming action results. Then, when the liquid is applied to the floor, the surface of the polish may have bubbles in it.

Q. — You and other writers on home problems often say that condensation on windows sometimes can be avoided by cutting down the amount of high humidity in the house. I know excessive moisture comes from cooking, bathing and things like that, but I don't know how to get rid of it except by opening windows, which can make it pretty cold at times. Isn't there any other solution?

A. — Yes. Several. You can use exhaust fans, especially in the kitchen and bathroom. They need not be turned on all the time, only when moisture-producing activities are going on in those rooms. You can place small vents in the outside walls or, instead of permitting the excess moisture to escape, you can trap it in a dehumidifier. None of this changes the basic premise that condensation occurs when the warm, moist air settles on a cold surface, so one objective is to prevent those surfaces from getting cold; hence, the value of storm windows or windows with thermal barriers. The subject is very complex and involves many factors, including the proper use of insulation, but remember that the big culprit is excessive moisture.

Q. — I am in the market for a portable electric sander. In some advertisements, I see the term "dual action." Can you tell me what it means?

A. — Some portable power sanders have an orbital action, which means that the pad to which the abrasive paper is attached moves in a modified oval pattern. It speeds the cutting action and is excellent for most jobs, but since there is a slight movement of the pad against the grain, some persons prefer not to use it for extra fine finishing work. Some sanders have a straight-line action, moving the abrasive pad back and forth so that you can sand with the grain if you wish. In a dual action sander, there is a switch or lever which permits the abrasive pad to operate one way or the other. This allows either kind of sanding action or, as is often done, sanding first with the orbital movement and then in a straight line.

(Thirty five do-it-yourself projects are described in Andy Lang's handbook, "Practical Home Repairs," which is available by sending $1 to this newspaper at Box 5, Teaneck, N.J. 07666. Questions can not be answered individually.)

Divider blends gracious living

Flexibility of uses and easy movement between rooms for family activities and entertaining are just two of the reasons many couples opt for an open plan when designing or remodeling a home.

Dividers are the secret to gracefully blending rooms together, designing them to allow just the right amount of visual separation.

Rooms Merge Visually

One family rearranged some walls while remodeling their house so there is a free flow of space from the kitchen into a semi-formal dining room and then into the living room.

The large kitchen in this country house is separated from the dining room by an island of cabinets with a counter and stools for quick meals, a row of hanging cabinets, and an open doorway.

Setting apart the living and dining areas is a short, open divider, an extension of the dining room wall. The end post of the divider also helps emphasize for safety the two steps down from dining to living room.

Rail Holds Plant

A flat rail of 2x6-inch western wood holds a potted plant that has been trained to climb the two vertical 1x1s of the divider and along the top of the dining room wall.

Let vines climb and cover bare ples and service area fences for a truly lovely effect. Imagine the added beauty an evergreen clematis with its masses of white flowers will provide to any fence in the yard. Or what dazzling color in deep shades of magenta, rose and gold a bougainvillea can add growing along the side of the house.

lines of patio trellises and overhead beams, while providing summertime shade and year round interest. A favorite for this task is the long lived grape vine, which not only supplies shade but fruit as well. For a purely decorative, but spectacular look, deciduous Clematis vines fill the bill. The large flowers and delicate vines make Clematis one of the most elegant vines for the patio.

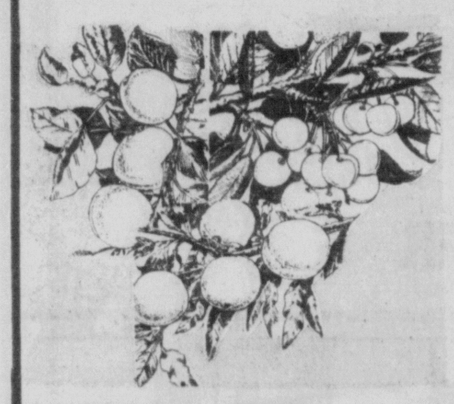

California gardeners can also plant vines with fragrant flowers. Sweet smelling Star Jasmine, Trachelospermum jasminoides, with star-shaped white flowers, is also prized for its deep green, glossy leaves. Two other popular choices for fragrance are true Jasmines and Honeysuckle. Be sure to keep their growth in check so that they don't completely hide the lines of fences and overhangs.

To cover walls with cool greenery, Boston Ivy and Virginia Creeper do the job and provide bright red fall color. Creeping Fig is another good choice, but watch out for invasive roots. The textures and patterns these vines create make them a worthwhile investment in any garden. A quick check through the neighborhood will show which vines do well and do the most for the landscaping task at hand.

JAPANESE ARALIA — The deeply lobed glossy leaves of Japanese Aralia (Fatisia japonica) fill in large spaces under shady overhangs. It also grows well in containers.

All plants need the sun's energy to manufacture their food. Some species normally exposed to high light intensities have developed dense layers of cells to reduce the amount of light that is able to penetrate the leaves. These plants would fail to perform in the shade. Others have adapted to the filtered light conditions found on forest floors. The shrubs and trees that can tolerate shade and filtered light situations create a lovely effect in the garden that is shaded by large trees or tall buildings.

The rich greens and varied textures of this group of plants help to create the cool refreshing atmosphere of a woodland hideaway. Helleborus niger, with its attractive foliage, is a very hardy and long-lived plant which blooms from late winter to early spring. Mass these with ferns and caladiums to add a tropical effect to the shade garden. The ferns can be house plants vacationing for the spring and summer months in the garden or hardy varieties that winter over. Caladiums, fancy foliage plants that come in shades of bronze, red, pink, white, green and silver, bring a certain elegance to the garden. These plants are surprisingly easy to care for outside.

A Podocarpus might be just the right plant to add some height to an entry way. These easy to grow shrubs or trees will grow quite nicely in a container for several years. A favorite in old fashioned and modern gardens alike is Bergenia. The low growing oval leaves make a perfect backdrop to the warmly colored pink flowers.

Artificial lighting may be used on some plants

Today home are filling up with healthy plants where plants would have withered and died before. Fluorescent and incandescent lighting combinations are the key to this miracle along with careful selection of plant materials.

Recent research in the field of artificial lighting has actually made it easier to choose the right kind of lighting. Tests conducted at the USDA (Beltsville, Md.) show that specially designed fluorescent plant lights that emit most of their light from the blue and red regions of the spectrum, do not produce significantly better results than conventional fluorescent lamps.

Light intensity, the amount of light a plant receives, seems to be the limiting factor, rather than light quality (kind of light). Traditionally, artificialy lighting available to the home gardener provided very low light levels compared to natural sunlight. On a sunny day the available light outdoors may range from 8,000 to 10,000 footcandles. Most lamps only put out 400 foot candles maximum. Remember too, that the intensity of the light diminishes with the distance away from the tube.

Unless care is taken to choose low light requiring plants, spindly or elongated growth may result. This type of growth indicates that the plant is still reaching and stretching for higher light intensities.

For the best results use fluorescent lighting in combination with natural available light during the day.

What to look for in paint brushes

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Despite the great popularity of paint rollers, millions of paint brushes are sold every year. The big difference between now and the past is that most of those in use today have nylon rather than hog bristles.

It is an erroneous impression that the main reason for purchasing a good quality brush is that it lasts a long time. Most assuredly, a superior brush has the durability that an inexpensive one lacks, but there's a better reason than that for buying one. It s because it produces excellent results right from the start. It picks up and retains the paint well. It permits the paint to go on smoothly without excessive splattering and dripping. The bristles are set firmly in the ferrule (the metal enclosure around the wide part of the handle) and do not shed easily. Cheap brushes, even when new, never give good results.

While it is true that price is a fair indicator of a good brush, there are certain ways to determine quality. The ferrule should be sturdy and fit snugly. The bristles should be springy and elastic and not limp and short. They should be thicker at the base, tapering gently at the ends, where they have splits or "flags".

A paint brush without these characteristics tends to dump most of the paint load the instant it touches a surface. The user then must take extra strokes to spread the paint over an equal or smaller area.

A cheap brush sometimes comes in handy when doing rough work where appearance is not important and when you may wish to discard the brush after using it once or twice.

It's a good idea to use a brush only for a single type of finishing material. Thus, a brush should be used only for an oil-based or latex paint or varnish or lacquer or shellac, and so on. Each handle can be given an initial or other identifying mark so you won't have to remember or guess from one job to the next.

Always use the correct solvent for cleaning — turpentine or mineral spirits for oil paints or varnish; water for latex paints; denatured alcohol for shellac; lacquer thinner for lacquer. When you are using an unfamiliar finishing material, the label will tell you what the correct solvent is.

Use the right kind of brush as well as one of quality. For large, flat surfaces, a 4-inch brush is about right. Use a trim or sash brush 2 or 3 inches wide for woodwork, paneling and trim. Best for sashes, trellises and things of that nature is a flat or oval sash brush from 1 to 3 inches wide. There are flat enamel or varnish brushes, chiseled to permit easier flowing, for furniture, toys and objects with small, flat surfaces.

Whatever way you choose to store your brush, be certain that the bristles are not in a bent position.

(For either of Andy Lang's helpful booklets, "Paint Your House Inside and Out" or "Wood Finishing in the Home," send 30 cents and a long, STAMPED, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P.O. Box 477, Huntington, N.Y. 11743.)

Keep Wisteria under control

As lovely as Wisteria vines are don't let them grow out of control and hide the lines of your home. Thin and prune wisteria way back after the spring bloom. Overgrown vines will stand severe shaping and pruning so don't be delicate.

Frequent, light feeding of lawn

More and more lawn specialists are convinced that frequent and light feeding is the best practice. The California Association of Nurserymen recommends monthly applications between now and late fall of a commercial lawn foods.

Gardeners check list

To gopher proof a flower bed line it with ½ inch wire mesh and secure it to the edging boards on both sides of the flower bed. Or try planting in pots (with drainage holes) to protect main roots.

There are insects in the soil, too. Maggots will attack radishes and onions and spoil your harvest. Drench the soil with the proper insecticide before you plant.

Many annuals will produce stronger growth if the terminal buds are pinched out at planting time. The fuller plants will reward you with more flowers and color than if left unpinched.

Prune to keep evergreen shrubs from encroaching on sidewalks and paths before new growth starts. When thinning, prune back to the main branch or trunk, and don't leave enough of a stub to hang your hat on!

Give lawn trees at least a two-foot diameter of grass free area around the trunk. This will end the chore of hand clipping around the trunk. More importantly it should end lawn mower damage to the trunk.

GLENDORA, CALIFORNIA FOR CHARTER OAK UNIFIED SCHOOL DISTRICT
LOS ANGELES COUNTY, CALIFORNIA

In general this project consists of a new Multi-Media classroom building and related site work, and repair to fire damage of an adjacent existing covered corridor. All work shall be complete in every respect, including all appurtenant utilities and equipment. The Base Bid and Alternates will be entertained on a lump sum basis for each item of work included in the Bid Form.

Prospective bidders may secure copies of said drawings and specifications upon a deposit of $50.00 per set at the office of the Architect. Said deposit will be refunded upon the return of such copies in good condition within ten (10) days after the bids are opened.

Each bid shall be made out on the forms furnished by CORWIN & WAY, and shall be accompanied by a certified or cashier's check or bid bond for not less than ten percent (10%) of the amount of the proposal, made payable to the Owner.

The Above-mentioned check or bond shall be given as a guarantee that the bidder will enter into contract if awarded the work or any part thereof, and will be declared forfeited if the successful bidder refuses to enter into contract after being requested to do so by the Owner.

Each bid shall be based on the information contained in the drawings, specifications, and the pertinent contract documents now on file and open for examination in the office of CORWIN & WAY, One West Mountain Street, Pasadena, California 91103.

Pursuant to Sections 1770 through 1777.5 of the Labor Code of the State of California, the Owner has determined that the minimum wages paid on this project shall be not less than those set forth in the latest approved wage schedule in the locality in which this work is to be performed for each craft or type of workman needed to execute the contract, which will be awarded to the successful bidder, to be as follows:

ROLLING STONE

By JUDSON KLINGER

HOLLYWOOD (KFS) — The lethargy of the sparse audience in the Aquarius Theater sharpened the apprehensive mood in the dressing room. In a few minutes, Micky Dolenz and Davy Jones, half of the original Monkees, and their original producer-songwriters Tommy Boyce and Bobby Hart would go out and complete a 10-year-cycle under the logo of "Don Kirshner's Rock Concert."

In 1966, Kirshner synthesized the bouncy commercial sound that made the Monkees a TV smash and sold over 15 million records on the Colgems label in one year. Now, re-syndication of the series and the legacy of last summer's successful tour of a half-dozen amusement parks with a show billed as "The Golden Great Hits of the Monkees" had earned the group a contract with Capitol Records. An album is due in April.

SELLING FRANKENSTEIN'S MONSTER

The Monkees saga reads like a marketing textbook crossed with Mary Shelley's "Frankenstein." They borrowed styles from a variety of sources and manufactured a laundered Yankee Beatles for TV.

Needing music, they turned to Kirshner, the master of assembly-line rock. The stars were chosen as pubescent prototypes, and the market was fed what it wanted: commercial music and innocuous comedy. Before it ended, the total income from the Monkees empire exceeded $180 million.

The producers promoted the illusion that the Monkees, actors with only some musical talent, were a credible rock group. "They had the idea to make us a rock group from the beginning and it was ridiculous," Dolenz said. "We couldn't do it. We weren't good enough."

But, after $250,000 royalty checks and $60,000-a-night shows, swollen wallets produced swollen heads. They started living their TV roles, believing they were musicians of star status. As a result, the group, especially Peter Tork and Mike Nesmith, began demanding creative freedom in the studio. The artificial Frankenstein had risen and was demanding to live its own life. Tork explained, "Here's the infinitesimal size of our original demand: to be hired as studio musicians on our own goddamned cuts." Kirshner countered, "I gave them a chance to do their own record. At that time, Peter couldn't cut it instrumentally." Dolenz agreed, "We should never have gotten away from the original sound."

HEAVY FEUDING

The conflict developed into an acrid feud. "Kirshner is shallow, bigoted and minimally concerned with human values," Tork said recently at his home in Venice, California, where he teaches English, math, drama and "rock band class" at a nearby high school. "Kirshner felt that by handing us checks he could win our undying loyalty. He had no idea what was important to us."

Again Kirshner shot back, "If they were so concerned about their creative integrity and self-respect, they wouldn't have taken the money. They took the money."

The issue finally exploded in 1968, at a suite in the Beverly Hills Hotel. Kirshner presented the group royalty checks for their first album, "The Monkees," and they presented him with their demand for creative control. Colgems vice-president Herb Moelis reminded them that they were under a seven-year contract, at which time an angry Nesmith put his fist through the wall.

A month after the hotel scene and his allegedly unauthorized release of "A Little Bit Me, A Little Bit You," Kirshner was fired. He sued for $35 million and, ultimately, a large settlement was made with Columbia.

FREE-FORM EGOTISM

Kirshner was gone — but so was his sound. The group's third album, "Headquarters," represented the Monkees' attempt to achieve critical acceptance. They wrote all the songs, played all the instruments, included Nesmith country-and-western influences and sold about half of the more than 5 million copies that their first album, "The Monkees," had sold. Production of the second season of the TV show degenerated into a free-form exercise in stoned egotism in which the stars ignored the scripts and fought with each other. The show dissolved, and without its support their fifth-and-last album, "Pisces, Aquarius, Capricorn & Jones, Ltd.," sold only 350,000 copes.

The group's last hurrah was "Head," the 1968 film written by Rafelson and Jack Nicholson. It became a cult favorite, but it was over for the Monkees. Tork and Nesmith quit, and Dolenz and Jones cut an album that went nowhere. The joke around the Colgems studio was that one of them would eventually milk the well dry with an album called "The Monkee."

The aftermath was tough. Tork formed a few bands, gave away much of his money, and eventually went to jail for possession of hashish.

Jones returned to the state in his original role of the Artful Dodger in "Oliver!" Nesmith recorded several low-selling country albums before founding his own media company. Dolenz missed out when he auditioned for the part of Fonzie on "Happy Days," and began playing in celebrity tennis tournaments.

COMMERCIAL REUNION

Then, in the spring of last year, the foursome met at Jones' house in Santa Barbara to discuss a reunion and the possibility of doing a commercial for McDonald's hamburgers. Nesmith refused to rejoin the group unless it involved another feature film. Tork demurred on the commercial because he was a vegetarian.

Dolenz and Jones persevered, and a package was eventually worked out with former producers Boyce and Hart. The new group would tour as "the guys who sang 'em and the guys who wrote 'em."

Now managing themselves, the group embarked on the amusement park tour. The contract with Capitol Records and appearances on the Dinah Shore Show followed. Now they were on the Kirshner show. Bygones will be bygones.

Taking the stage, Dolenz swaggered, clowned and sang in a raspy Joe Cockerish voice while Jones, Boyce and Hart added the sweet-voiced harmonies of middle-aged choirboys. Backed by several members of the original Paul Revere and the Raiders, they closed their set with their new single, an upbeat bubble-gum song.

Ironically, its title was "I Remember the Feeling."

Douglas Fairbanks Jr.

Not 'the good old days'

BEVERLY HILLS, (AP) — He seemed a handsome throwback to the past, his moustache clipped to a fine edge, the tie and kerchief matching perfectly the conservative suit, the near-white hair in a neat pompadour.

All around Douglas Fairbanks Jr., in the Polo Lounge of the Beverly Hills Hotel was the New Hollywood: rock concert promoters in jeans and plaids, hot young directors in sneakers, a visiting female star, her hair in curlers.

Far from viewing the scene with distaste, Young Doug, as he was called in his earlier years, seemed amused. Although a scion of the onetime First Family of Hollywood, he remains doggedly unsentimental about the "good old days."

"I don't remember them as 'good old days,'" he commented. "All I remember is working hard in films, worrying about whether the next option was going to be taken up, being abused by the button-hole makers who had made it to the top of the industry. There were tyrants in those days — the Harry Cohns, the Louie Mayers — and we were subject to their whims.

"I know the younger generation looks at the shinier product of those years and thinks that we made such classics. What they don't realize is that we also made a lot of trash."

Fairbanks is here to visit old chums, promote a book and do a TV job. He is staying at Pickfair, fabled mansion of his father and Mary Pickford and now occupied by America's Sweetheart and Buddy Rogers. She hasn't been seen outside Pickfair in several years because of declining health.

"But she has made a remarkable comeback," reported her onetime stepson. "Five years ago we were all concerned about her, in fact, we thought we were going to lose her. Now she seems amazingly well." A special award from the Motion Picture Academy helped raise her spirits.

The Fairbanks-Pickford mystique is elegantly captured in a new book, "The Fairbanks Album," a collection of photographs and press clippings.

"I really had very little to do with it, except to ask friends and relatives to help supply photographs," said Fairbanks. "Richard Schickel put it together and supplied the commentary." There are a few revelations, including the fact that the elder Fairbanks, the biggest star in silent films, was upset when his son entered movies.

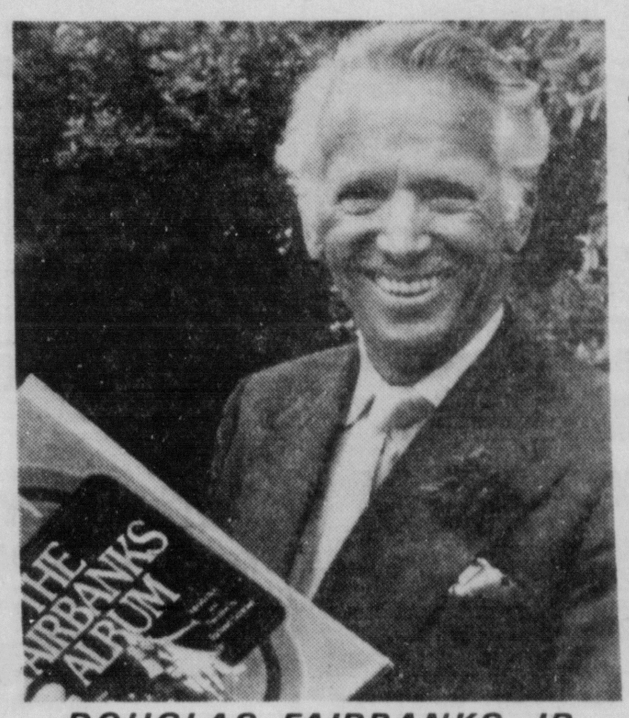

"I suppose I might have reacted the same way," said Fairbanks Jr. "He probably felt I should continue my schooling and thought I was being exploited because of my name.

"I don't believe he felt threatened — not by a teenage boy, not when he was making classics like 'Robin Hood' and 'Black Pirate.' I was being pushed into small parts in big pictures and big parts in small pictures."

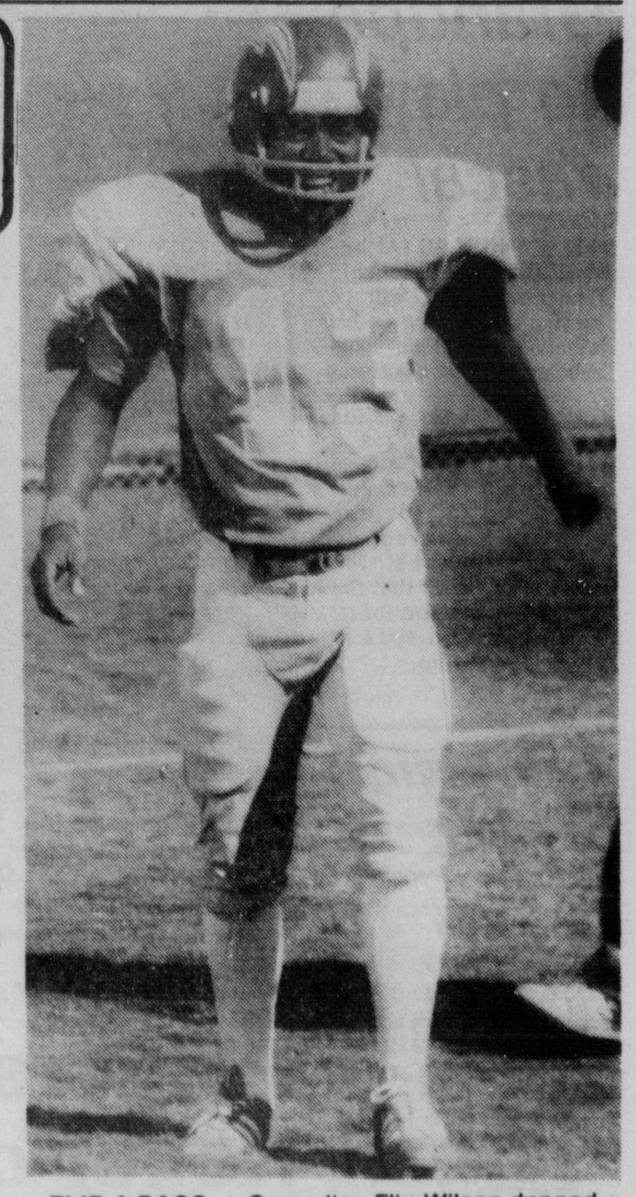

While he is here, Fairbanks will co-host a television show previewing the Academy awards. He resigned some years ago as a member — "I had retired from the industry and the Academy seemed to want my dues more than my vote." He hinted his displeasure: "My father was the first president of the Academy but never got an Oscar in his lifetime. They waited until after he was dead to give him one."

He hasn't made a movie in more than 20 years ("they don't even ask me anymore, and I don't think I want to risk it"). But at 66 he remains busy as ever with his international enterprises and good works.

Fairbanks sold his showplace home in London to a rich Arab. Now his home base is the Vicarage ("it really was a vicarage, built in 1895") in West Palm Beach, Fla.

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS JR.

FLIP A PASS — Comedian Flip Wilson donned a San Diego Chargers uniform to scrimmage for his special, "More Travels with Flip," airing on CBS-TV at 8:30 tonight. Obviously he's not superstitious. The show takes him to Hong Kong, Thailand and other points in the Far East.

Pilot season starting

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The pilot season has started in Hollywood as television networks gear up for the season turnover. Here are three proposed series:

"Walkin' Walter," a halfhour, three-camera comedy about an ex-vaudevillian living with a sister-in-law and three kids in Harlem. Comic Spo-De-Odee stars in the Paramount production for ABC.

NBC has ordered a 90-minute pilot of "The Hancocks," about three generations of an American family. Joanna Pettet, Anne Archer, John Anderson and Kim Hunter star for Warner Brothers.

Bill Bixby and Bo Hopkins star in "Brahmin," a two-hour western for NBC.

Piano pupils plan recital

Twenty-four piano students of the teachers section of the Musicians Club of Pomona Valley will present a recital in Pattison Hall, Scripps College, at 8 p.m. Saturday. Admission is free.

Old sailing ship, now museum, to sail again

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Never too old.

The one-time cargo ship has been a museum at the San Diego waterfront since 1927. After a hull-cleaning late in the spring, the ship will head out to sea as part of the nation's bicentennial program.

In the years before retirement, the 205-foot ship with 25,000 square feet of sail made trading trips on the England-India, West Coast-Australia and San Francisco-Alaska routes.

Scottish art

BROCKVILLE, Canada (AP) — The eighth annual 1000 Islands International School of Scottish Performing Arts will be held here July 5-16.

Grandpa to play rascal

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Will Geer, the lovable Grandpa Walton, will be playing a scalawag on his vacation from the long-running television series.

Geer has been cast in "Dick and Jane" as a larcenous owner of a huge aerospace firm. He is outfoxed by a former employee, played by George Segal, but the caper is so clever that the tycoon admires him for it. Jane Fonda also stars in the Columbia film.

PATIENT GUIDE — Merrilee Drake as Anne Sullivan helps blind Helen Keller (Nancy Hallamore) draw water in the Trinity Players production of "The Miracle Worker." The drama will be staged at the Trinity United Methodist Church, Pomona, opening March 26.

'Women' set at Pitzer

The Four Colleges Players of Claremont will present "The Women," by Clare Booth Luce, in Avery Auditorium, Pitzer College, at 8 p.m. April 1-4. Tickets are $1.

The drama begins as the classic tale of a lovely, contented wife (Mary), played by Denise Margolin, who discovers that her husband has been unfaithful.

Susan Obrow, who will be directing the production, described it as a "paradox."

Miss Obrow premiered as a director in the fall semester in the Four Colleges Players production of Pinter's "The Homecoming." She has been active in improvisational drama and traditional theater for over four years.

TRAVELING SALESMAN — Actor George C. Scott evokes the many moods of salesman Willy Loman in rehearsal for Arthur Miller's "Death of a Salesman" at the Circle in the Square Theater, New York City. The performance marked the theater's 25th anniversary.

Fonda plans 4 films

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Peter Fonda, whose "Easy Rider" started new trends in film making, is getting back into film production.

The actor's Pando Company has signed a four-picture deal with United Artists. Fonda and partner William Hayward will produce the films, all of them starring Fonda.

'The Miracle Worker'

Players set Keller drama

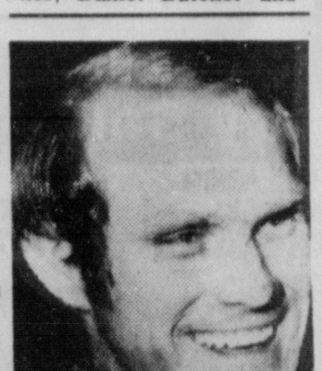

The Trinity Players of Trinity United Methodist Church will present William Gibson's "The Miracle Worker" at the church, 676 N. Gibbs St., Pomona, at 8 p.m. March 26 and 27 and April 2 and 3 and at 2 p.m. March 28 and April 3.

The play recounts the story of Anne Sullivan taming and teaching the deaf, dumb and blind Helen Keller.

Diane Butcher directs.

Reservations can be made by calling the church, 629-9748.

TERRY BRADSHAW, quarterback of the worldchampion Pittsburgh Steelers, will sing during Country Music Jamboree at Disneyland Saturday and Sunday. Bradshaw will perform with numerous country-western stars.

Chorale to offer 'Requiem'

The San Gabriel Valley Philharmonia Chorale, conducted by Thomas Schultz, will present its spring concert at four Southern California churches.

The concert consists of Faure's "Requiem." Accompanist will be Garnet Mallery, organist of the Covina United Methodist Church.

The programs will be offered at the Ascension Lutheran Church, Los Angeles, at 7:30 p.m. Sunday; at St. Martha's Episcopal Church, West Covina, at 7:30 p.m. April 4; at Iglesia Presbyteriana in La Verne at 4 p.m. April 11, and at the Church of the Good Shepherd, Covina, at 7:30 p.m. April 11.

Marilyn Hassett set for 'Shadow'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Marilyn Hassett, who portrayed the ill-fated skier Jill Kinmont in "The Other Side of the Mountain," will co-star with Jan-Michael Vincent and Chief Dan George in "Shadow of the Hawk."

The International Cinemedia Center film will be shot on locations in and around Vancouver, B.C., with Daryll Duke directing.

GARTH "WOODY" ELLWOOD

Firehouse Inn in Pomona DOES have seafoods, and in a selection large enough to boggle the mind of the uninitiated yet discriminating enough to please the connoisseur. Not being the latter, I asked some questions regarding the Firehouse Sampler Platter set before me. The waitress pointed out oysters and clams on the half shell nestled among oysters prepared several different ways (Rockefeller, Italiano and Firehouse,) baked clams casino, shrimp. crab, lobster cocktail combination and broiled mushroom stuffed with crabmeat . . . a real seafoods sampler for $5.95. The seafoods dinners (selection of 18) range from Salmon to Shrimp, from Lobster and Scallops to Turbot and Trout.

Firehouse Inn was at one time, as some of you will remember, the firehouse for the city of Pomona. Pictures on the walls testify to this fact and show that firetrucks once stood where lounge patrons there now sit. In fact, the fire pole which Pomona firemen once slid hurriedly down is still there in the foyer, a nostalgic reminder of days past.

After dinner the Firehouse, I decided a little exercise was in order and I chose The Depot in Claremont for dancing and cocktails. Though I really don't enjoy dancing on carpet, the rockings of Track 1 finally proved irresistible and I joined the dancers, coaxed from their seats by the heavy sounds of the Al Eaton-led group.

I noticed they have enlarged the lounge there a little by knocking out the south wall of one of the "Boxcars" to allow additional seating. This, I think, is an improvement. Next, a dance floor, maybe?

Dave Bakes is all set to open his new El Matador Mexican-American restaurant tonight. The former Candlelite Inn in Montclair has been closed for the past two weeks while Dave and family (wife Fran and parents Lou and Ma Bakes) have been working to transform the place into a restaurant which looks, tastes and feels Mexican.

A different decor will greet you when you visit: wrought iron grillwork outside and separating the lounge area inside, and sombreros and highlighted pictures of Mexico (most of which were framed by Lou, by the way) line the walls. And at the end of the dining room is a large print of a toreador, from which the inspiration for the name of the restaurant was derived . . . El Matador.

The Bakes' have retained the American dinners which have proved popular (like the 2 for $7.50 Prime Rib), while introducing a new Mexican menu which will include most combination plates. And for their grand opening they are offering some specials, the details of which you'll find in their ad on page 26. El Matador is located at 4210 Holt in Montclair.

It may be due to my advancing age, but sometime it seems that the main problem in going to a new restaurant is just that . . . going there. By that I mean it can be a hassle finding out how to get there, what offramp to take, etc. I suppose I'm a creature of habit who gravitates towards the familiar, but I find that once I've visited a "new" place, even if it's rather distant, it's much easier to go back. Simply because I know how to get there. I suppose this is a rather inane matter, but I'm thinking of some of the fun I'd have missed out on if I hadn't explored. (Ever been to the Oar House, a Santa Monica nuttery-eating place that's worth the trip? . . . or to Donte's in North Hollywood, a jazz supper club that's worth several?) and, of course, there are many unique places much closer.

Several weeks ago I went to the Oak Tree in Covina, a niteclub neither unique nor hugely exciting. BUT they DO have Barbara Stanton there, entertaining five nights a week with The Johnny Fortune Trio. She puts on a great show and is very popular with the folks there. She's also a very warm and friendly person. And, best of all for us, she entertains every Monday night in Chino at Casa de Narod.

(Speaking of Narod's, Mar-C tells me that The Four Guys Plus 1 will start things going at 7:30 on Sundays instead of the customary 9:00 starting this week.)

Oldies & Goodies performers Johnny G. and Bryan "Legs" Walker, referred to last week in this column as helping out with the O&G Night at The Younger Bros. in Chino, are making a hit with the customers of the new club. I was there last Tuesday night (again) and the place was packed (again.)

RESTAURANT AND NIGHT LIFE

DELICIOUS FOODS of Mexico as well as American food favorites are served to customers of La Paloma, a restaurant regarded by many as outstanding. Manager Joe Parker and waitress Gloria Baltierra go over the menu in preparation for evening business at 2975 Foothill, La Verne.

NEW BARTENDER at the Sage Hen is Norma Jean, shown here serving customer Schneider Went. Management of the popular restaurant on Foothill Blvd. at Central Ave. broke with a male-only-behind-the-bar tradition to let Norma Jean's smile enliven the place.

Yawns are natural and healthy for you. When we yawn, we are helping our breathing.

A yawn is a very deep breath in which big gulps of fresh air are pumped into our lungs, supplying our blood with more oxygen. Usually, we yawn when we are tired or drowsy and our bodies are relaxed. It is a sign that the body needs sleep, but it can mean other things, too.

We may also yawn when our bodies are not getting enough fresh air. Then we may need better ventilation, or exercise.

One purpose of yawning may be to awaken a person by stretching the muscles and helping the blood to get things moving again. You don't yawn when you wake up. Yawning wakes you up!

Suggestion also causes yawning. When we see others yawn, we are likely to yawn. You may be yawning now, just from reading this.

And yawning is common in animals, too. Dogs, cats, monkeys and turtles yawn. So do birds and most, if not all, backboned animals.

Here's wonderful news! A pocket radio, camera, World Almanac globe or other fine prize will be awarded to the first youngster sending in a question used here. Send your question and your age to Johnny Wonder, (c/o this newspaper), Box 1335 (DA), Santa Cruz, CA 95061.

PUBLIC NOTICE

ORDINANCE NO. 2770

AN ORDINANCE OF THE COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF POMONA, CALIFORNIA, AMENDING CHAPTER 31 OF ORDINANCE NO. 1673, ALSO KNOWN AS THE CODE OF THE CITY OF POMONA, BY ADDING SECTION 31-53-5, PROVIDING FOR A LIMITED CERTIFICATE OF PUBLIC CONVENIENCE AND NECESSITY.

BE IT ORDAINED by the Council of the City of Pomona, California, as follows:

SECTION 1. That Chapter 31 of Ordinance No. 1673, also known as the Code of the City of Pomona, California, is hereby amended by adding Section 31-53.5 thereto, providing for a limited certificate of public convenience and necessity, and to read as follows:

A limited certificate of public convenience and necessity may be granted to private ambulance companies to operate private ambulances upon the streets of the city to transport patients to points within or without the city. A licensee under such limited certificate of convenience and necessity shall be entitled to use the streets of the city for ambulance services when its service is requested directly by a patient or his agent. In no event shall any city police, fire or civilian defense authority request emergency ambulance service from such licensee unless no holder of a general certificate of convenience and nesessity is willing or able to render the required emergency service. Every holder of a limited certificate of public convenience and necessity shall conform with Section 31-57 (C and D), and Sections 37-58, 37-59, 37-61 and 37-62 of the Code of the City of Pomona, and to any other conditions of the Council might impose on the licensee upon the granting of the limited certificate of convenience and necessity. Every limited certificate of convenience and necessity shall expire on the anniversary date of its issuance, but may be extended on a year to year basis by the city administrator at his sole discretion."

SECTION 2. The City Clerk shall certify to the passage and adoption of this ordinance, and it shall thereafter be in full force and effect after publication as required by law and the elapse of thirty days after its final reading.

Yorba Drive
This home exhibits craftsmanship that is no longer found in construction today. Many hours of meticulous labor were spent making sure every facet of this home was perfect. Over $25,000 was spent insuring that the landscaping would be second to none, and it is. The Japanese Garden may possibly be the most authentic in the U.S. The replacement cost of the home would well exceed $90,000, however for a limited time it is offered at only $70,000.

The Conquest of New Providence Boosted The Revolution . . .

A big boost to the Revolution

By DON McLEOD
Associated Press Writer

If the Americans had known how difficult 1776 was going to be for their Army, they might never have declared for independence. But the spring of that year of national birth was glorious.

Boston was liberated in March. Tory uprisings in the South were suppressed. A British invasion of Charleston was repulsed. Foreign friends began sending aid.

And, perhaps most encouraging of all, the young Continental Navy was taking the war to the enemy. On March 3, 1776, the U.S. Marines stormed an enemy beach for the first time.

"The first American fleet that ever swelled their sails on the Western ocean," boasted a colonial newspaper, "sailed from Philadelphia amidst acclamation of many thousands assembled on the joyous occasion."

Disregarding orders to patrol the southern coasts, Commodore Esek Hopkins, commander-in-chief of the new navy, sailed straight for the British Bahamas and dropped anchor off Grand Abaco Island March 1.

While there, Hopkins captured two island sloops and confirmed from their crews his highest hopes. New Providence Island held a large store of arms and powder desperately needed by the Continental forces and was defended only by local militia.

But assaulting the town of Nassau was a risky business. An island protected the narrow harbor, and each entrance was commanded by a fort.

So Hopkins packed his marines below decks on the two captured ships and on his own sloop Providence. The three innocent-looking craft, he hoped, could sail into the harbor without raising suspicion.

But the American Navy had a lot to learn about fleet operations. Hopkins' warships sailed so close behind the sloops that dawn discovered the entire force bearing down on Nassau.

The harbor pilot rushed to government house where he roused Gov. Montford Browne, who hastened to the fort still in his nightshirt and ordered three shots fired in alarm. Two of the weapons

When Henry Knox came to the rescue

By DON McLEOD
Associated Press Writer

One of America's great traditions is the self-made man, and Henry Knox was one. Self-taught, self-confident and determined, he performed one of the most amazing feats of the Revolution.

America might have lost its fight for nationhood in its infancy if Knox, a fat bookseller turned soldier, had not delivered the guns which allowed George Washington to strengthen his fledgling army and liberate Boston.

"Col. Knox of the artillery, came to camp," Gen. William Heath entered in his journal 200 years ago last month. "He brought from Ticonderoga a fine train of artillery."

A modest recognition for a monumental deed. Knox had hauled 60 tons of artillery and supplies from Fort Ticonderoga in New York, across the length of Massachusetts to Boston in the dead of a winter that numbed horses and oxen and terrified men.

For more than 300 miles they pulled and pushed their cargo on rough-hewn sledges over treacherous mountain trails, through deep woods, across frozen lakes and rivers which often cracked under the weight, and through smothering snow banks.

When animals refused to struggle on, men pulled an impossible load. And when men hesitated, Knox's own assurance and courage kept them going and rallied the countryside to their aid.

The Americans had the British penned up in Boston. But if the Redcoats had known just how short of supplies the rebels were, they might have rallied forth and crushed the Revolution.

Washington's skill in keeping his weakness a secret only resulted in criticism from his own troops and from Congress. Why didn't they drive the outnumbered British from their shores? Men threatened to go home when their enlistments expired in the spring.

But with the big guns from Fort Ticonderoga Washington could defend his own siege positions, command Boston and prevent the arrival of British supplies from the seas. Without them, it was a matter of time before the English massed enough men and equipment to defeat him.

So Knox, a military amateur who had been helping engineer the fortifications, came to Washington with a plan. Why not go after the guns captured from British forts on Lake Champlain?

It was impossible, but Knox, with a new colonel's commission in his pocket and only 25 years old, set out for New York on Nov. 17, 1775.

Most of the guns captured the previous spring by Ethan Allen and Benedict Arnold were beyond use, but Knox selected 59, ranging from little 4-pounders to mighty 24-pound guns.

Some of the bigger guns weighed 5,000 pounds each. The total load, with ammunition, was about 120,000 pounds. Knox hurried south to prepare the land route.

His brother William, meanwhile, began the 33-mile voyage down Lake George through a channel in the ice, which stretched a mile from each shore of the narrow lake. The first day out a boat struck a sunken rock and was freed only after exhausting labor.

Then, halfway down the lake, the big scow struck again and sank in shallow water. The guns were lifted from icy water by freezing hands and repairs to the scow were made in the middle of the lake.

Once ashore, everything was transferred to 42 sledges pulled by 80 teams of oxen. By Christmas eve the advance guard reached Saratoga in a heavy snowstorm. The artillery train struggled all Christmas day through three feet of fresh, loose powder.

Moore's Creek: it's the forgotten battle

By DON McLEOD
Associated Press Writer

In any revolution there is an element of civil war, of dissenters struggling against the tide of history. Providence makes one side winners and patriots, the other losers and villains.

Many Americans in 1776 had doubts about revolution and defiance of the British king. They believed in freedom, but they thought it was possible under the English Constitution rather than in revolution.

Some of them were willing to fight for a tradition which had kept them and their principles safe for generations. But to the consternation of the British, they never rose in sufficient wrath and number to quench the insurrection.

One of the main reasons was a strange campaign that took place in the damp and chill of a North Carolina winter and reached a climax 200 years ago at a little bridge over Widow Moore's Creek.

It began in the summer of 1775 when two British officers in civilian garb slipped ashore at New Bern. They were quickly spotted and carried before the Committee of Safety.

Donald McDonald, an elderly gentleman, and his young friend, Donald McLeod, confessed to being British officers, but said they had been wounded at Bunker Hill "and left the army with a desire to settle among their friends."

The Carolina back country was full of McDonalds, McLeods, McLeans and McArthurs and a most likely refuge for two Scots officers who said they had seen enough war. The strangers were so convincing they were

New Providence...

Shortly after noon the Providence and the schooner Wasp, guns loaded and run out, swept in close to the beach six miles west of town and set out whaleboats filled with Marines.

From Fort Montague, militia Lt. John Pratt saw the marines and sent half his scant 60 men "to reconnoitre and if possible prevent their landing." But by the time they arrived 234 American Marines and 50 sailors were ashore and formed into marching ranks.

Meanwhile, Governor Browne, apologizing for his tardiness and explaining he had been detained by "a violent fit of Cholick," arrived and led the main body of militia, still only about 80 men, to reinforce the fort.

Browne dispatched a party to reinforce the patrol at the beach, but the reinforcements only ran into the main body of militia beating a hasty retreat.

Back down the trail the Marines, not knowing most of the defenders had fled, were in a precarious position, making their way around a deep cove, "with a prodigious thicket on one side, the water on the other, entirely open to their view."

Sensing a lack of enthusiasm among the defenders, Hopkins applied psychological warfare with a proclamation saying he only wanted the munitions "and if I am not opposed ... the Persons and Property of the Inhabitants Shall be Safe."

But Governor Browne was to have one satisfaction. He loaded 162 barrels of gunpowder onto two ships which slipped out the western entrance to the harbor, incredibly left unguarded by Hopkins. He could have saved it all but feared this "might enrage a disappointed enemy, and induce them to burn the town, and commit other depredations."

Hopkins then brought his victorious fleet into the harbor and began gathering the booty. It totaled 88 cannon, 15 mortars, thousands of shot and shells, 24 casks of powder and various other supplies.

There was so much loot it took two weeks to load it, and Hopkins had to press an island schooner into service to carry the overload. On March 16 Hopkins set sail, taking Browne with him, apparently in pique over losing most of the powder. The governor was later paroled.

On the homeward voyage the fleet took three prizes, a small English sloop, a large rig, and the armed schooner Hawke, the first British warship to be captured by the Continental Navy.

The flotilla also ran into the 20-gun British frigate Glasgow, which mauled the heavily-laden Americans and then made good her escape, although outgunned 4 to 1.

But despite the concluding embarrassment, the American fleet dropped anchor off New London, Conn., on April 8, 1776, at the conclusion of the most successful naval operation of the Revolution.

Bolstered with confidence at news King Louis XVI of France agreed to an alliance with American in 1778 during its war for independence from Great Britain, a daring Continental sea captain, John Paul Jones, took the war right to Britain's very own shores. Refitting a French vessel donated to America's fledgling navy, Jones dubbed his battleship "Bonhomme Richard." The ship and crew, says the World Almanac, earned glory and recognition following their victory over the HMS Serapis on September 23, 1778 which it engaged when returning from a raid on British coastal defenses.

The nation's first President, George Washington established the precedence of a chief executive serving only two consecutive terms, an unwritten tradition until Congress made it law after the death of President Roosevelt in 1945, the World Almanac notes. Washington refused a third consecutive term in 1797 and retired to Mount Vernon until his death two years later at the age of 67.

Controversy has raged for years among historians over what the nation's first flag of independence looked like. Many feel the first "Old Glory" resembled Great Britain's familiar Union Jack but others maintain the flag may have originated in Easton, Pa. Those supporting Easton's claim say it was first flown from the Court House there on July 8, 1776 upon the first reading of the Declaration of Independence, according to the World Almanac. The flag is believed one of the first and most recognizable versions of the so-called "Betsey Ross" flag, 13 red and white stripes and 13 white stars in a circle in a field of blue.

Henry Knox...

Following crude roads, Indian trails, or none at all, they made no better than two miles a day — all at great strain. Oxen and horses gave out and had to be abandoned. Men often pushed the sleds.

When things seemed unendurable, the people of the countryside found their courage and came to help. With fresh horses and men, they struggled into Albany by year's end, only to be stalled by thin ice on the Hudson.

Knox spent the first days of 1776 cutting holes in the ice to force up water which froze in layers, thickening the ice until it could bear the weight of heavy guns. Where there was only open water, sleds, guns and draft animals had to be loaded on boats and rowed across.

But despite all precautions there were disasters. Knox recorded on Jan. 7 that a cannon being eased across the ice "fell into the river ... and in its fall broke all the ice for 14 feet around it."

The next day they "proceeded so cautiously that before night we got over three sleds and were so lucky as to get the cannon out of the river, owing to the assistance of the good people of the city of Albany, in return for which we christened her — The Albany.

South of Albany a sleigh shattered under its load and detained the column. But then Knox plunged east into the Berkshires and reached Monterey, Mass., on Jan. 10.

Then they ran into a 12-mile stretch of dense evergreen forest and steep hills.

Now they had to descend from the mountains at Westfield. The teamsters took one look and refused to go. The steep incline, with overloaded sleds threatening to slide out of control on the snow and ice and crush them, was madness, they said.

"But after about three hours' persuasion ... they agreed to go," Knox reported.

In Springfield, the ice held until they were over the Connecticut River, but on the other side they stuck fast in the mud.

The way ahead was still hard. But towns along the way welcomed, fed, refreshed and cheered the weary troops.

"The noble train of artillery," as Knox called it, was delivered on Jan. 24, 1776, 47 days after leaving Ticonderoga.

On March 2 Knox's guns began shelling Boston, and on March 17 the British evacuated the city, a date still celebrated annually by Bostonians.

At a weight ranging up to 300 pounds, Knox looked like anything but a soldier. And by normal standards he wasn't.

He was born in Boston in 1750. His father went broke in 1756, left his wife and two surviving sons for the West Indies, and soon died there. Henry was forced to leave school and support his mother and three-year-old brother.

Knox may have begun to develop his revolutionary politics in 1770 when at the age of 20 he witnessed the Boston Massacre after personally pleading with the British officer in charge to withdraw his troops before blood was shed.

There he met George Washington.

Knox showed a facility at artillery warfare. He designed a new gun carriage which enabled him to engage guns in greater number and mobility than Europeans had done.

It was Knox who personally directed the transport of Washington's troops across the Delaware on Christmas night 1776. He was awarded the rank of brigadier general.

Knox was with Washington at Valley Forge. He was at Yorktown, and he was the first to embrace Washington in farewell at war's end.

He became a major general in time and succeeded Washington as commander of the army after the war.

Henry Knox did not look like a hero. He was too fat. He was entirely too jovial to be taken for a thoughtful genious. He even died a tragi-comic, premature death at the age of 56 from swallowing a chicken bone.

But he represented young America, this self-made general, too unsophisticated to be cowed by the impossible.

Sham battle

Taking just a few liberties with history, Union blue and Confederate gray locked horns once more to recreate a Civil War skirmish just outside St. Louis. Though the Confederacy never threatened Missouri's biggest city 110 years ago, their contemporary counterparts not only threatened but defeated the Union troops in an afternoon battle. Approximately 10,000 spectators turned out near the Jefferson Barracks, now a national cemetery, to witness the approach of authentically-garbed Union troops (top left). Awaiting them with loaded muskets were the gray-clad minions of the Confederacy (top right). Fantasy prevailed as Abe Lincoln strolled through the crowds of onlookers (left) and two youngsters (right) couldn't resist an opportunity to inspect a real Civil War cannon used in the mock battle.

The battle at Moore's Creek

allowed to go on their way after taking an oath of loyalty to the colony and promising to cause no mischief.

McDonald, a lieutenant colonel, and McLeod, a captain, had, in truth, fought at Bunker Hill, but they were not looking for retirement. They were secret agents sent to raise a tory army.

Loyalists enlisted in the backwoods would march to the sea, link with British regulars and a war fleet and bring North Carolina back under control. The combined force then would take Charleston and secure South Carolina. Georgia, considered the weakest link in the rebellion, would fall in line.

Maybe even whiggish Virginia would be overawed, the neutralist forces in the middle colonies strengthened, the rebels of New England isolated and the war won quickly.

On Jan. 10, 1776, Gov. Josiah Martin, from the safety of a British ship, issued a proclamation beseeching loyal subjects "to repair to the Royal banner."

Sir Henry Clinton sailed with a force from Boston on Jan. 20. Gen. Charles Cornwallis sailed from Ireland Feb. 13 with 2,500 troops in a fleet commanded by Vice Adm. Sir Peter Parker.

On Feb. 5 McDonald, who had recruited well among his country cousins, called for a gathering of the clans at Cross Hill, now Fayetteville, N.C. A thousand Highlanders answered the call in kilts and tartans, and swinging their claymores, the ancient broadsword of the Scots.

They were joined by remnants of the Regulators frontiersmen who had risen against the domination of the seaboard elite and had been beaten in the battle of Alamance in 1771.

The rebels, meantime, had not been idle. Two regiments were being readied for the Continental Line, and Col. James Moore, the senior officer, took to the field as soon as he learned of the tory buildup.

From the countryside streamed militia and minutemen, fiddles screeching to rival any bagpipe, ragged and unmilitary but numerous and effective.

"They indeed made a most unmartial appearance," said an observer. "But the worst figure there can shoot from behind a bush and kill even a General Wolfe."

They made only four miles before running into Moore's force blocking the bridge over Rockfish Creek. And two companies, fearing McDonald might attack, "ran off with their arms very early that night."

The wiley McDonald sent a messenger into the enemy camp with the stern warning that unless they stopped this rebellious nonsense, "I must consider you as enemies and take the necessary steps for the support of legal authority."

"We consider ourselves engaged in a cause the most glorious and honorable in the world," Moore said, "the defense of the liberties of mankind, in support of which we are determined to hazard everything dear and valuable."

Meanwhile, McDonald was slipping upstream, where he crossed the northwest branch of Cape Fear River, burned the boats to prevent pursuit and headed back toward the coast.

When Moore realized at last he had been outfoxed, he began laying a trap with more care this time. Col. Richard Caswell, approaching from New Bern with 600 militiamen, was ordered to the next crucial crossing, at Corbett's ferry on the Black River.

Colonels John Lillington, with 150 men, and John Ashe, with 100, were sent to reinforce Caswell by forced march. But if this failed, they were to "take possession of Moore's Creek Bridge," the next crossing after the Black River.

Finding his way blocked once more, McDonald turned again to a ruse. Sending "a few men and a drum and a pipe to amuse Caswell," he moved upstream and crossed on a hastily built bridge.

Caswell's troops stayed pinned down for three days by the random firing and music of a handful of decoys while McDonald escaped.

But Lillington was

(Turn to Page 7, Col. 1)

Moore's Creek . . .

already dug in at the bridge over Moore's Creek, and a blushing Caswell, taking a more direct route, raced to the crossing ahead of McDonald.

They were only 17 miles from Wilmington and the sea. Another ruse and McDonald would reach his objective with his army untouched. But the younger officers demanded a fight, and the weary McDonald gave in. Too ill to lead the assault, he named Donald McLeod to command in his place.

About 1 a.m. on Tuesday, Feb. 27, 1776, the loyalists were "order'd under arms" and 800 of them began a six-mile march to the bridge. At their head strode the broadswordsmen.

It took all night to reach the bridge through a swamp. The Highlanders stole into Caswell's camp just before dawn expecting to trounce a sleeping foe.

But the camp was empty. Caswell had moved across in the night and had dug in on the far side of the creek. At the same time he had the planks ripped from the bridge and the round beams greased.

McLeod's puzzled troops regrouped and waited for the first light of day. Suddenly the silence was broken by an exchange of shots between pickets.

Three huzzahs rang out from the Scots, signaling attack. A drum began to roll and the pipes to shrill. And shouting "King George and Broadswords," they charged the bridge.

Discovering Caswell's demolition, McLeod thrust his sword into the slippery logs and, using it for balance, worked his way across. Capt. John Campbell and his swordsmen followed.

Despite all their setbacks, the tory rush had taken the rebels by surprise. Coming upon an abandoned trench, the Scots sensed a retreating enemy, "and in the most furious manner," reported Moore, "advanced within 30 paces of our breastworks and artillery.

"Where they met a very proper reception."

A volley of musketry cut through the Scots who had made it across, and the boom of two cannons swept away those still on the bridge.

The Highlanders struggled against the bridge and the rebel fire. Many fell into the stream and died. Others fell back to the shelter of the forest. But soon panic set in and all fled.

The battle, one of the closest and most important in our history, had lasted three minutes. At least 50 tories died and hundreds were captured. Only two rebels were wounded, one fatally.

"This, sir," reported Moore to the president of the Provincial Council, "I have the pleasure to inform you, has happily terminated a very dangerous insurrection, and will, I trust, put an effectual check to toryism in this country."

LOOTING AS THEY GO — The British army under Howe, undefeated but hopelessly outmaneuvered, evacuated Boston in March 1776 — looting as they go. Military supplies they couldn't take away by ship were smashed and thrown into the sea. That was the soldiers' final revenge on the old town, now besieged by Washington, which they had occupied for six years, frustrated at every turn.

Taking Boston was a matter of logistics

By SID MOODY
AP Newsfeatures Writer

On the final day — a Sunday — of the year 1775, George Washington, his wife Martha, and his military family attended services at Christ Church in Cambridge, Mass. At Martha Washington's request, Col. William Palfrey delivered a prayer. It was an ambivalent blessing, but no more so than the year that was about to dawn.

"O Lord, our Heavenly Father," Palfrey began, "We beseech Thee to look down with mercy upon his Majesty, George the Third. Open his eyes and enlighten his understanding that he may pursue the true interest of the people over whom Thou in Thy Providence hast placed him."

Palfrey concluded: "Be with Thy servant, the Commander-in-chief of the American forces. Afford him Thy presence in all his undertakings; strengthen him that he may vanquish and overcome all his enemies ... (these) cruel and bloodthirsty men ... Amen."

Just a few miles away the minions of those two men so blessed, George of the House of Hanover and George of Mount Vernon, confronted each other in an almost farcical stalemate. The British wanted to get out of Boston, but they lacked enough ships to take them. The Americans wanted in, but lacked the gunpowder. So they remained, like two men stuck in a revolving door.

Before the troubles Boston had been a clamor of commerce. Now it was an armed camp, two-third of its 16,000 citizens fled to the countryside to fight or escape.

It was not accidental that fighting had started near Boston, for it was truly the initiating hub of the Revolution. Boston was where Britain's trade regulations had been most severely felt and where, correspondingly, the reaction had been most violent. The collision was all but inevitable. But if the British had had their way, they would not have been there at all.

The town was too easily dominated from the surrounding heights on the mainland once the rebels obtained artillery. The countryside and its food were in rebel hands, and the Yankees were running off cattle and burning hay on the islands in the harbor.

In November, Sir William Howe, the British commander, received orders from London to give up Boston before the hard New England winter arrived and move south, preferably to New York. But he calculated he needed 35,172 tons of shipping to evacuate his men, and only 23,750 tons were available. The British would have to stay until spring.

So London sent 5,000 oxen, 14,000 sheep, 10,000 butts of beer, 180,000 bushels of coal, plus oats and hay for the horses. Much of it arrived rotten. Foul winds drove other supply ships to the West Indies. And Washington, acting on his own, had created his own navy of privateers who darted in and out of the rocky harbors they knew so well to nip at the slow British merchantmen.

On the other side of the lines, Washington was trying to rebuild his army, most of the enlistments having expired Jan. 1. Some, despite pleadings from the commander-in-chief, had gone home even earlier, taking their muskets with them.

Besieged, himself, by selfdoubt as the new army signed in, Washington was relieved that the British had not attacked at his most vulnerable moment. And surfacing with that relief was, perhaps, a little pride.

In a Jan. 4 letter to Joseph Reed, an absent aide, he wrote:

"Search the vast volumes of history through and I much question whether a case similar to ours is to be found; to wit, to maintain a post against the flower of the British troops for six months together, without (powder) and at the end of them to have one army disbanded and another to raise within the same distance of a reinforced enemy."

Historians have wondered at Howe's reluctance to attack such an army. The British force was nearly 9,000 men. One reason, surely, was Bunker Hill, where 45 per cent of the British soldiers had been casualties, their heaviest loss of the Revolution. And reinforcements were months and thousands of miles away. Howe had other reasons for caution. He reported to London in January 1776 that the enemy army was not "by any means to be despised, having in it many European soldiers, and all or most of the young men of spirit and conscience."

By February, Washington's force had risen to 8,797 men in camp with 1,500 more available on short notice and 7,000 militia in reserve. The British advantage had been lost.

On Feb. 16, Washington called his generals to a council of war. Should he attack Boston at last? The consensus was no. The Americans lacked sufficient arms and powder. But it was decided to seize Dorchester Heights on a peninsula south of Boston, putting Howe within easy range of Henry Knox's guns.

As a diversion, Washington planned a waterborne landing of 4,000 men on Boston proper. Gen. William Heath opposed this as foolhardy in the face of flanking British fire. Some historians agree, hypothesizing that if the force of green troops had landed and been wiped out, as it well might have been, the British could have overcome the survivors and settled the conflict right there. Nature rather than second sight by Washington would make the matter moot.

For Dorchester Heights, Washington had assembled, under Gen. John Thomas, 360 ox carts loaded with prefabricated fortifications — bales of straw and barrels of dirt. The barrels, a suggestion of a Boston merchant, were to do double duty. Should the British attack, they could be rolled downhill on them.

As dawn broke, the British were awed to see a fort on the hill where nothing had been the afternoon before.

While Gen. Israel Putnam paraded 4,000 Continentals for the landing on Boston across Back Bay, Howe marshaled his own landing force of 2,200 men to attack the new fort by sea at 5 a.m. March 6. No ammunition was issued the men. It was to be a bayonet charge in the best British tradition, fortified by an issue of rum and water for all hands. The redcoats looked "in general pale and dejected" and one told another: "It will be another Bunker Hill, or worse." They would have looked even more dejected if they had known Howe had already decided to depart Boston.

But about midnight March 5 a violent gale swept in from the south making both the American and British landings impossible.

Howe canceled the mission and issued orders to abandon the town.

The Boston Tories were thunderstruck. "No Electric Shock, no sudden, Clap of thunder, in a word the last trump could not have struck them with greater consternation," said Washington.

A group of leading citizens who had remained in Boston meanwhile contacted Washington March 8 that Howe was leaving. Thereafter there was an unspoken agreement to let him depart in peace.

Howe's army had not been defeated. It had been outmaneuvered by a larger force and something that was to always distinguish the American military, resourceful logistics. Even had he attacked successfully inland, the Americans would simply have moved further into the interior. Victory for the British lay in the defeat of the rebel army, not the conquest of land. This was the fatal flaw in their strategic thinking throughout the Revolution, one they never came to grips with.

In any event, with meat stores sufficient for only three weeks and American cannon pointing down on him from Washington's miraculous fort, Howe would move to Halifax in Nova Scotia to regroup with the reinforcements already on the way. His defeat was tactical, his withdrawal strategic.

In their final days in Boston, the British soldiers, frustrated at every turn in their six-year occupation, turned on the old town that had so long been their nemesis, plundering and looting. Military supplies that could not be taken aboard the fleet were smashed and thrown into the harbor.

One of the last off was a Marine lieutenant named Adair who was sent out to The Neck to distribute crows feet on the road, Britain's final military operation in Boston. These were four-pointed spikes, something like a child's jack, designed to impede marching horses and men. An officer's fitness report of Adair's performance: "Being an Irishman, he began scattering the crowfeet about from the gate towards the enemy; and of course, had to walk over them on his return, which detained him so long that he was nearly taken prisoner."

Washington's men had been watching all the activity through spyglasses. Gen. John Sullivan rode down towards Bunker Hill where he saw some redcoats shouldering arms as if on sentry duty. Moving closer, he noticed they weren't moving. They were dummies. Sullivan then "bravely took a fortress Defended by Lifeless Sentries" one of whom bore a sign. It read "Yankees, Good bye!"

BICENTENNIAL FACTS

Abigail Adams met George Washington for the first time on July 15, 1775, soon after he took command of the Continental Army at Cambridge. She was very impressed by him " . . . the one half was not told me," she wrote her husband, John, of his "Dignity with ease . . . Modesty marks every line and feature of his face," The World Almanac recalls.

Colonists looked to the cities as life-style pacesetters. New York, Boston and Philadelphia were centers of fashion and extravagant dress. One look down a city street revealed a cosmopolitan mix of people whose rank on the social ladder was easily visible in a frock coat with pretentious buttons made of Spanish dollars, or in homely roundtoes shoes and shiny leather breeches.

Here and there one might see a dandy in a long-tailed coat and red-heeled shoes, or an aristocrat in a heavy silk waistcoat with satin embroidery knee breeches, white stocksing and buckle shoes.

Working men wore heavy linen shirts, breeches of striped ticking, a leather apron and a heavy coat of duroy or a buckskin tunic called a "warmus," open down the front and secured by belts or ties . . . never by upper-class buttons.

While gentlemen wore the famous cocked hat of the period, laborers sweated under slouch hats: beaver in winter, straw in summer. In typically practical Yankee fashion, their boots and shoes were made to fit either foot. Breeches were full with no opening flap. When pants wore shiny on the seat, they were simply turned around and worn shiny side front.

The Revolution began to bring an end to dandified ornamentation in clothing. Colors were dark but never dull. Warm browns, dark orange, blue, purple and so-called french green became popular. Jewelry was no longer worn.

The ways of speech and dress are as significant for identifying the cast of mind of the ordinary person as are papers and manifestos for the lettered and learned. Just as Americans embraced in their language the democratic and unorthodox doctrine that one word was as good as another, so in their dress they began to discard tailored distinctions in class In short, it became "difficult to distinguish one from another."

George Washington, the man who thought it was sufficient to be addressed as "Mr. President" rather than as "Highness" or "Excellency," once thought it fitting and proper to appear at his inauguration accoutered im a simple, dark brown broadcloth suit — the first cloth manufactured in the United States at Worchester, Mass.

Fashion was a burning and divisive issue in young America, with overtones that reflected Tory and patriot philosophies, George Washington had strong views on the matter of appropriate dress.

He once advised his nephew that "A person who is anxious to be a leader of the fashion, or one of the first to follow it will certainly appear in the eyes of judicious men, to have nothing better than a frequent change of dress to recommend him to notice."

In the city, colonial belle dames frequently went about in wooden clogs with leather straps and poplar soles. These individual "boardwalks" were necessary for walking on cobblestone — where there was cobbled pavement — and mud where there wasn't. They were about as noisy as horseshoes, however, and ladies were requested to remove them before entering church.

Both men and women of means fancied wigs, for which a person's head was shaved and measured. And from 1760 onward, ladies' hairstyles began to rise. Hair was pomaded with grease so that the decorative white powder would stick. Wool, bran, horsehair and cushions on wire foundations were employed to build the hairdo up to three feet or more. The top was often adorned with flowers and feathers or surmounted by a cap or bonnet called a calash.

After her hair was fixed, a woman would sleep sitting up to keep from mussing it. The hairdo lasted as long as three weeks, and so did the discomfort. Mice, lice and other vermin, so infested these pompadours that special head scratchers wer provided to ease the itching. Designers created long, jewel-encrusted head scratchers to dignify this funamentally unsanitary fashion.

Today, of course, fashion is still an important issue in most people's lives: although you probably couldn't tell the difference between a Democrat and a Republican by the way he or she dressed. In the colonies, fashion was a symbol of political and social beliefs. The change in dress was one more step in the transormation from Englishman to American.

BICENTENNIAL FACTS

Letters from home written by Abigail Adams to her husband while he served in the Continental Congress proved valuable in military and political intelligence. Sharp with details, Abigail sent news of enemy troop movements and kept John Adams abreast of events in and around British-held Boston. Adams proudly wrote to a friend of "A Lady at the Foot of Pens Hill, who obliges me . . . with clearer and fuller Intelligence, than I can get from a whole Committee of Gentlemen," The World Almanac recalls.
